SCENES OF HORROR.

Lives Lost in a Minneapolis Fire-trap.

A Crowded Eight-story Newspaper Building in Flames.

Fifteen Inmates Burned to Death or Dashed to Pieces.

A Professor, Two Editors, Associated Press Agent, Telegraph Operator and Several Printers Among the Killed.

By Telegraph to The Times.

MINNEAPOLIS (Minn.), Nov. 30.—[By the Associated Press.] Fire was discovered on the third floor of the Tribune building, about 10:45 tonight, and soon the entire building was wrapped in flames. On the seventh floor were situated the offices of the Tribune staff, editors and compositors. A number of employés, in attempting to escape, jumped from the windows. A number of lives were lost, and at midnight seven bodies had been taken out of the ruins. The only body yet identified is that of Prof. Olsen of Vermillion (Dak.) University, who had gone to see a friend. He jumped from the top floor and was instantly killed.

MINNEAPOLIS (Minn.), Dec. 1.—1 a.m.—The number of lives lost is over half a dozen, and possibly 10 or more. The building was an eight-story structure at the corner of First avenue and Fourth street. It is occupied by the Tribune, Tribune-Star (evening edition of the Tribune), Minneapolis office of the Pioneer Press and Evening Journal, besides a large number of other offices. The Tribune editorial force was on the seventh floor, and their composing-rooms are above it. On these two floors there were nearly a hundred persons employed when the fire broke out. Access to the building was by way of an elevator, around which a narrow and dark stairway wound. At night this stairway was the only means of ingress or egress. The building might be called and the danger to those located there has been often commented upon. The fire broke out in the third floor, and soon the upper floors were cut off from the street. The building was on the corner, and the adjoining buildings were only one story in height, so no means of escape was afforded in that direction. The flames cut off the escape of the Pioneer Press force on the sixth floor, as well as the Tribune folks on the seventh and eighth. Reporter Barnes of the Pioneer Press had a narrow escape from the building, and left behind him Milton Pickett, assistant city editor, and one of the oldest men in the service of the paper. Pickett was lost in the burning building. The Tribune force suffered most from the be-

James F. Igoe, night operator of the Associated Press, met with a sad death. He was at work on the seventh floor when the report of the fire was received, and immediately opened the key, stated the fact to the head office at Chicago, and asked for a minute's time to investigate. Soon he returned to the instrument apparently thinking he was safe, and told the sending operator to continue. In a moment he said he would have to skip. He found it too late, and that escape was cut off. He jumped from a seventh-story window, and was so badly injured that he died before reaching the hospital. He leaves a family.

SOME OF THE DEAD.

"Old man" Pierce, a printer, was also killed.

One report says that 10 were killed, but up to midnight only six bodies had been taken from the ruins which were then falling in. Those known to be dead are Assistant City Editor Pickett, W. E. Mills, agent of the Associated Press, James F. Igoe, Associated Press operator, John Olson, president of the Vermillion (Dak.) College, Harry Colwell, —— McCutcheon and —— Pierce, printers.

A general alarm was turned in and all the engines in the city responded to the call. The emprisoned printers gathered at the windows in the south end and despairingly for aid. "Hurry the ladders, for God's sake!" was shrieked with all the vehemence and power that the anguished dozens in peril of their lives could muster. The vast crowd from the opposite side, viewing the fire wreak its fury, shouted words of encouragement and good spirits to them in a strenuous endeavor to buoy them up. The long ladder seemed to move up at a snail's pace, but was finally rested in position, and the crowd began to descend. The flames making steady encroachments in the corner where the frightened men had huddled, life-nets were brought and some were saved by this means.

The entire building less than an hour after the fire started was a mass of ruins. Sparks are now flying in all directions, and the adjoining buildings, occupied by a restaurant, saloon and tailor store, are doomed. The Tribune building was a 5-year-old brick structure, and was valued at $300,000. The loss will probably reach $1,000,000. The insurance is not ascertained.

AT THE MORGUE.

At the morgue lie six bodies, that of Prof. Olsen inclosed in a plain, pine coffin. On the floor is the body of Jerry Jenkinson, a compositor of the Tribune, a young man, who was shortly to be married. Beside him are two bodies so bloated and burned, with the blood still oozing from their terrible wounds, that thus far they have not been recognized. On two tables are the corpses of Robert McCrutcheon, a compositor, and Milton Pickett, reporter on the Pioneer Press. Jenkinson endeavored to make his escape on the heavy telegraph wires. He clambered down a short way, but was unable to retain his hold, and was oblized to drop to the ground. When picked up he was dead. McCrutcheon jumped and was instantly killed. James F. Igoe, the Associated Press telegrapher, made a vain endeavor to escape by coming down the wires. He had descended till within 50 feet of the ground, when he was compelled to loose his hold and died while being conveyed to the hospital. He leaves a wife and family.

LOS ANGELES, DEC. 1.—RED RICE'S establishment most sincerely returns thanks for the great patronage bestowed upon us during the two weeks just past. So great has been the demand that it has taxed the capacity of even our great segregation of household goods to supply the demand. Never before in the history of this lucky house has the trade been so great. For this reason we again tender our heartfelt thanks, and offer this as a suggestion to the curious to ponder upon. In new furniture, etc., we buy cheaper than any other house in the city because we handle it in larger quantities. We handle larger quantities because we sell cheaper. In second-hand goods we pay higher prices than any other house, and we sell for less price because doing so large a business we can afford to do it on a less percentage of profit. Whether you wish to buy or sell, it is money for you to get prices at Red Rice's when you are sure to be posted.

THE GRANGERS.

Preparations for a Pleasant Reception Tomorrow.

The Chamber of Commerce Committee appointed at the last meeting of the chamber to arrange for the reception of the National Grange met yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock in the chamber to make final arrangements. The grangers, numbering 91, will arrive on the regular train from San Francisco at 7:25 tomorrow morning at the Wolfskill depot. They will be met by the committee, and after breakfast carriages will be in waiting and the party, or all who remain over in Los Angeles, will be driven through the principal streets. At 10:30 o'clock the party will bring up at Simpson Tabernacle, where are informal reception will be held for about an hour. The tabernacle will be decorated for the occasion, and doubtless many citizens will be present to bid the strangers welcome.

At 12 o'clock they will return to the depot, and as guests of the Chamber of Commerce they will be taken in a special train to Alhambra. At that place lunch will be served at the hotel, and the party will be driven to the principal points of interest in the San Gabriel Valley. They will then return to Los Angeles and will take the eastbound train.

The chamber has arranged to present the grangers with a lot of flowers and fruits, and it is expected that the car occupied by the visitors will be loaded down, as Mr. Fuller has been collecting fruits, etc., during the past week. Everybody is invited to furnish flowers for the car.

A FINAL DECISION

That J. Marion Brooks Is a Trustee.

A decision has been rendered by the Supreme Court in the suit brought by John W. Green vs. J. Marion Brooks, in connection with a real-estate deal in which the Philbin tract, in this city, of 36.65 acres, has been the bone of contention. Mr. Brooks bought the tract for $125,000 in June, 1887, and subdivided it into lots. The sales of lots aggregated $100,000, leaving two-thirds unsold. Under the purchase contract, Brooks guaranteed T. J. Cuddy 25 per cent., and John W. Green one-third, of the net profits. there was also an agreement that Brooks was to receive 10 per cent. commission on money advanced upon the purchase, and of this 6¼ per cent. was to go to Green and 3¼ per cent. to Cuddy. Mr. Green's suit was to have Brooks declared a trustee to him to the extent of one-third of the property and proceeds, and account for it. The case was decided in Green's favor by the Superior Court, and the Supreme Court affirms the decision.

THE HORSE-CAR VICTIM

IDENTIFIED AS W. A. CLINTON, A STONE-CUTTER.

He Was on a Spree, and, Besides, Was a Little Deaf, So That He Probably Did Not Hear the Car—Coroner's Inquest.

The body of the man run over and killed by a street car on the Depot line, at the corner of Second and Los Angeles streets, Friday evening, and supposed to be W. Clinton, was yesterday fully identified as that person. A brother of the deceased, B. H. Clinton, a streetcar conductor, saw the account of the accident in the papers and at once came over to the morgue, where he identified the remains. Mr. Clinton was greatly affected over the sad death of his brother, and notified the family of the deceased, after which he returned to the morgue to make the funeral arrangements. Here he was seen by a TIMES reporter, to whom he stated that he had last seen his brother alive the afternoon preceding his death. He was generally very busy, and saw but little of his brother, but on this day went over to call on him. His name, he said, was W. A. Clinton. He was a native of Missouri, and 43 years of age. He had a family consisting of his wife and five children, the eldest being a girl aged about 17 years, a boy of 13 and the others all quite small. He came to Los Angeles something over 10 months ago from his home at Nevada, Mo., and worked at his trade, which was that of a stone mason, as long as he could get anything to do. Of late, however, he has been unable to get any regular employment, and worked at anything he could get. He was a drinking man; that is, he occasionally got on sprees, and had been drinking recently. He was also somewhat deaf, which probably had something to do with the accident, as he could not hear the cars. Mr. Clinton said that his brother had been living on Courthouse street, out near the dummy line, where he moved some time ago. His family, he said, was almost helpless, and was in a pretty bad fix, as they had nothing laid up, owing to Clinton having been out of work for so long.

At 2 o'clock the inquest was had, the testimony being taken down in shorthand. The first witness examined was B. H. Clinton, the brother of the deceased, who merely testified as to the name, age, etc., of the dead man.

George H. Baxter, a colored janitor, who claimed to be an eye-witness of the accident, was the next witness. He stated that he was standing on the corner when the man was run over, and assisted in lifting the car over him. The man was trying to cross the street when he was struck by the car, and fell under the wheels. The car was coming at a good rate of speed at the time. He was positive that the man did not slip, but was struck by the car and knocked down. Another man named Bates was also standing on the corner and saw the whole thing.

O. E. Mason, an attorney, also said he saw the accident. He was coming up Second street toward Spring, when he saw the car stop suddenly, and the first he heard was [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] sent after the [illegible] [illegible] to the station, where he died. The car was coming up the street at an ordinary trot, as street cars generally go. He did not wish to reflect on any one, but he thought that the accident could have been prevented, as it was 12 or 14 feet from the head of the mules to the front truck of the car.

G. E. McChristy, the Grange saloonkeeper, and Officer Whaling testified, but their evidence was unimportant.

George de Fain, the driver of the car, repeated his statement, substantially the same as given at the police station the night previous. He was crossing Los Angeles street, coming west on Second, and driving slower than usual, when he saw the man falling about six feet from his car. He tried to stop, but the man fell between the horses and the car, and the front truck passed over him. He assisted in pushing back the car, so as to get the man out. There were no passengers on board, and the only man that he saw was the conductor.

W. E. Longstreth, the conductor, repeated his former statement, in substance, which closed the evidence.

The jury retired, and after deliberating for some time, returned a verdict in accordance with the above facts, further stating that the matter was purely accidental, thus exonerating the railroad employés.

After the inquest the railroad people stated that Baxter had called at the stable in the morning, intimating that he could do them good, in case they made it an object, but that they did not encourage him.

The funeral of the unfortunate man will take place today.

CROWN HILLS.

A Section of the City Christened—New Board of Trade.

A large and enthusiastic meeting of citizens was held on Friday evening at the west end of the McLaughlin cable road, to consider the advisability of effecting an organization to promote the interests of that section.

A. N. Averill was called to the chair.

By unanimous vote, it was resolved to christen the hill region about the Belmont Hotel site as the Crown Hills, and to organize the Crown Hills Board of Trade. The district was made to embrace the territory from Temple street on the north to Ward street on the south, and from Bunker Hill avenue on the east to the west city limits. Thirty of the citizens gave in their names for membership.

The desirability of opening a thoroughfare through the hills for all the western portion of the city was informally discussed.

The next meeting will be held on Friday evening, December 6th, in the same building, corner of First street and Belmont avenue. At this meeting a permanent organization will be effected by the adoption of a constitution and bylaws and the election of officers.

Citrus Fair.

A quorum was not obtained yesterday at the meeting of the Citrus Fair Executive Committee. Messrs. McComas of Pomona, Snow of Tustin, Gray of Alhambra and Miller of Riverside were present. A plan for a premium list was talked over, and the committee is enabled to announce that the grand premium for the best and largest display will be $100. Other premiums will be in proportion.

FRESH LITERATURE.

List of New Books on the Library Shelves.

Following is a partial list of new books just received by the Public Library, which are now accessible to the public. An invoice of 2000 has recently been received and now are on the way. By a recent arrangement with publishers, the library is to be supplied as soon as books are issued, and thus the public will be favored with the reading of them even before they are on sale with the newsdealers. Under the present thorough management the library is constantly increasing in popularity. A full catalogue is soon to be issued.

A TOTAL WRECK.

Clinton Petitions to Become an Insolvent.

W. A. Clinton, who has figured so prominently during the past year in this city, through financial and domestic troubles, yesterday filed a voluntary petition in insolvency in the Superior Court. The petition sets forth the names of creditors, and it is seen that the indebtedness consists almost entirely of promissory notes, due to persons living in the city. The total indebtedness amounts to $93,262, and the creditors are as follows:

First National Bank of Los Angeles, $8000; East Side Bank, $8000; Samuel Hellman, $1000. J. J. Reddick, $2000; George Poucin, $1200; Crawford & McCreery, $3500; P. Beaudry, $1200; George B. Griffin, $350; Dr. H. Nadeau, $150; Baron Rogniat, $212; C. H. Seamans, $500; S. W. Luitweiler, $325; John J. Schallert, $1200; George A. Dobinson, $400; José Mascarel and the estate of Miguel Leonis, $35,000; José Mascarel, $3000; José Mascarel, $7000; Lee Vickery, $250; H. Lebie & Co., $150; Jacobs & Co., $35.

The petition sets forth no assets for this large indebtedness, except that, under the head of the real estate, it states that there is none, except that which is held as collateral. The amount of real estate thus held is not mentioned. Under the head of personal property, the petitioner states that he has none except his wearing apparel. There is no means of ascertaining the amount of Mr. Clinton's available assets, but it is claimed that a portion of the indebtedness will be wiped out by real estate held as security.

The failure is quite a large one, and the creditors some of the most prominent men in the city. It is the culmination of financial embarrassment, under which, it has been known for some time, Mr. Clinton was laboring. He is one of the reckless real-estate speculators, who went far beyond their depths during the boom. Coupling with his reverses after the period of excitement, domestic disagreements, which culminated in a divorce between himself and wife, the result has been almost a complete wreck for the young man.

PASSING AWAY.

THE CALIFORNIA INDIAN—THE RACE DYING OUT.

An Appeal by Agent Rust—The Indian as a Citizen—The Present Indian Policy—Education—Land—The Treaty of 1848—The Nation's Wards.

In Pasadena, on Friday evening last, as announced in THE TIMES, H. N. Rust, vice-president of the Pasadena Academy of Sciences, and Indian Agent of the Pacific Coast, delivered an address on the present status of the California Indian, before a large and appreciative audience, at the Universalist Church. The subject is one which should interest every thinking man and woman, and about which very little is known.

Mr. Rust has spent a life-time in studying the life history of the Indian, and no one on this coast is better posted in the affairs relating to them. He said, in substance, since the discovery of this country there has been an almost continuous warfare between the native races and their uninvited, unwelcome guests, the white man.

We have overrun the entire country, crowding the Indians back onto the frontier, until we have no frontier, and today the fact is patent to all observers that the Indian must be absorbed into our rapidly advancing civilization, as the negro has been.

This is a fact worthy of the consideration of every American citizen.

Before another generation passes off the stage, every Indian will have become an American citizen, with all its responsibilities and privileges, and we are unexpectedly coming to this by force of circumstances.

By the treaty of Guadaloupe Hidalgo of 1848, by which the United States acquired California from Mexico, we guaranteed to all her subjects the same political rights which they enjoyed as citizens of the United States of Mexico.

We have rarely recognized that right on account of their ignorance, and only a few of the more intelligent have offered to vote.

This is as it should be, for I believe the franchise is not, as has been held, "a divine right," but should be the reward of intelligence and good character.

I would not extend it to ignorance and vice, but the inevitable is upon us; how shall we meet it?

The Indian policy of the past has been a very uncertain quantity, and the Government has tried by making treaties and by breaking treaties, by making war upon them, by feeding them in idleness and by various expedients to secure their lands for settlement, and all have been unsatisfactory.

During the past 20 years a more reasonable public sentiment has been inaugurated, and has put in motion a better policy. It has been discovered that the best method to treat wild Indians is to treat them as wild men, and tame them as soon as possible; in other words, to educate them as quickly as possibly, and hold them amenable to civil law.

The old Mission Fathers understood this, and the reason our Mission Indians have not been hostile like the wild Apaches across the Colorado River is because they were brought under their civilizing influences.

[illegible] some 100 miles south of this point, they were so wild that they were obliged to catch them with the lasso, and in that way did bring them to baptism and civilization.

But the waning fortunes of the fathers left the poor Indians weak and impotent to cope with the strongest of the white race, viz, the gold-hunter and the land-grabber.

The Indian has readily adopted the vices of the white, and had little chance to learn his virtues. We taught them the use of strong drink, and now curse them for using it.

The commonest sentiment in the West is that "All good Indians are dead Indians," and yet all good men who have been among them have found much to commend. We all remember the names of Massasoit, of King Phillip, of Logan, of Black Hawk, Chief Joseph and Capt. Jack, men of strong character and great abilities. We do not measure the character and ability of the race for manhood and citizenship by such men, or by the quiet, self-supporting, long-suffering, industrious Indian, but rather by the few hostile savages who, driven to desperation by the crimes of white men, secure notoriety as criminals and outlaws, and from these we judge all Indians alike.

That eastern sentimentalism of which we hear so much has crystallized into what is now an intelligent Government Indian policy, and has recently been announced by Gen. T. J. Morgan, Commissioner of Indian Affairs. In brief it is this:

To break up all tribal relations and make them all alike amenable to civil law.

To give to all heads of families 160 acres of land, but in such a way that they cannot alienate it during 25 years.

To give to all of school age a common school education, which shall include such instruction in the commonest arts and agriculture as shall fit them for laborers and producers as fast as they pass from school; that they may be self-supporting, useful citizens. Surely no reasonable man can object to this, and this in short is the present Indian policy, and in the support of this the Government agents need the moral support of every good citizen in carrying out this work.

The Indians are now within our reach. But few, comparatively, are hostile, and this is not so great an undertaking as may seem.

Experience has taught us beyond question that it costs less to educate an Indian in school than to kill him by the army.

The cost to educate an Indian to be self-supporting is less than one-tenth of what it costs to keep him in pauperism.

I am, said Mr. Rust, often asked by well-meaning people "can they be educated?" as if it was an open question. Our prejudices sometimes overrule our better judgment, and prevent that investigation which would increase our intelligence.

Their inability to speak English, their customs and uncivilized ways are repulsive to us, and few strangers care to study their real thoughts and character; but we have plenty of evidence that they are capable of rapid improvement. Here Mr. Rust read several letters received from Indian boys, showing what they could do, and made a strong and stirring appeal for support for them. He also gave a most interesting description of his late journey through the Indian country that, rich in interest and incident, was listened to with attention by the audience.

The lecture, presenting as it did the present status of the Southern California Indian, will undoubtedly do much good. The people should be well informed of the wants of the wards of the Nation.

TIRED LADIES.

Closing Night of the Relief Corps Fair.

Last night was a busy one for the tired ladies who have worked so earnestly and successfully to carry everything through at the Woman's Relief Corps Fair at Armory Hall. It was the closing night of the fair proper, although a closing ball will be given Monday night. The attendance during the day was large, in spite of the inclement weather, and at night the hall was well filled.

The dinner during the afternoon was served by John A. Logan Corps, and all agreed that it was one of the best given during the week.

The night was a continuous scene of excitement, due to the closing up of the voting on the various most popular people, whose status was to be determined by the suffrages of the participants in the fair. There was also an auction of many of the articles donated to the fair for that purpose, and the booths presented a very much stripped appearance when the voice of the auctioneer was hushed late in the evening.

The rivalry in the voting was very great during the closing moments, and if it had been possible the ballot boxes would have been stuffed; inasmuch as this was out of the question the adherents of the different candidates were forced to retire from the field.

One of the most exciting scenes was over the voting for the most popular president of any of the Relief Corps, and in that there was a dense crowd around the voting place, and the way votes went in was a caution. The result of this ballot was as follows: Mrs. Abbie Johnston of Stanton Corps, 216; Mrs. Weeks of Gelcich, 209; Mrs. Sterling of Frank Bartlett, 90; Mrs. M. F. Tarble of John A. Logan, 14. The prize for this vote was a handsome toilet set.

For the most popular secretary of the different Relief Corps Mrs. Hartwell of Stanton Corps received the highest number of votes.

The voting for the elegant gold-mounted sword was spirited, and resulted in Capt. A. W. Barrett receiving 544 votes, while Department Commander Gard had 235.

On the vote for the most popular county official the following votes were cast: Sheriff Aguirre, 1014; Recorder Francis, 895; Assessor Mason, 175; County Clerk Dunsmoor, 70.

For the most popular city official, the vote resulted: Councilman Summerland, 474; Councilman Brown, 340; Councilman Wirsching, 50; Street Superintendent Morford, 41; Mayor Hazard, 14.

An amusing vote was for the homeliest woman, which was won by Mrs. Spear, who is handsome; the ugliest man was voted to be Mr. Charnock. The prizes in this were an elegant pincushion and sofa pillow, respectively.

R. A. Ling, Esq., received the largest vote for the most popular attorney.

Officer McGraff obtained the largest vote for the most popular policeman.

There were quite a number of other events in the awarding of prizes during the evening, but they were not returned and could not be obtained.

The fair has been a very successful one, and the net receipts will be quite large. The fair will close with the ball on Monday night, which will no doubt be as largely attended as any evening of this most enjoyable and successful week for the ladies of the Relief Corps.

One of the members of the Duff Opera Company got into a fight on Main street yesterday morning about 4:30 o'clock, and was brought to the police station, where he was registered as William Jones. C. E. Berry, whose address was given as the Grand Central Hotel, was also booked as a witness. The true inwardness of the fight could not be ascertained. The members of the company had a grand celebration, with closed doors, at the Vienna Buffet, after 12 o'clock yesterday morning, when beer flowed freely and a general good time was indulged in, and the row probably grew out of something that transpired at the entertainment. Mr. Jones—which, by the way, is not the gentleman's real name—was brought before Judge Owens during the afternoon, where he expressed himself as sorry for what he had done, paid the costs, amounting to $6, and was discharged.

Officer Walsh and Mrs. Watson.

Police Officer Walsh, who has just returned from San Francisco, where he placed his niece, Mary Walsh, in the Magdalen Home, has written a lengthy communication to THE TIMES, in answer to the card published by Mrs. Watson in the Herald some days ago. Mr. Walsh says that Mrs. Watson misrepresented everything to his erring niece, and, in place of trying to rescue her from a life of shame, allowed her to leave her home in this city, and then tried to get him, an innocent man, trying to save his brother's child from destruction, into trouble. He says that Mrs. Watson persistently misrepresented the Magdalen Home in San Francisco, trying to keep her here, in place of encouraging her to go to that place. The officer, in very forcible language, denounces Mrs. Watson for having misrepresented him before the public, and quotes from the published card in support of his statements.

GEO. A. WERNER.

Geo. A. Werner, the well known book engraver, of 531 California St., S. F., writes to the Edwin W Joy Co., that his wife has been taking Joy's Vegetable Sarsaparilla for months for liver trouble and indigestion with splendid results. He says, "we have found it invaluable for keeping the system regulated. It divides the load with a dyspepsial stomach and replaces the distressing sense of fulness and oppression with a feeling of ease and relief. It is a perfect liver and bowel regulator. We have both been taking it for months. It is good to have handy."

COURT NEWS.

THE TRIAL OF MRS. SAMPLE FOR WILL FORGING.

She Repudiates the Idea That She Is a Voodoo—A Couple of Divorces—Tribute to the Late Mr. Broaded—Bellardes, the Shooter.

Laura E. Sample, the colored woman accused of forging the will of the late Barber Susand, by which she was to receive a legacy of $5000 out of his $20,000 estate, is either an exceedingly clever actress or did not commit the crime with which she is charged. Her trial is now going on in Judge Shaw's department of the Superior Court, and considerable testimony was taken yesterday. There were no particularly fresh developments in the case yesterday, the line of testimony by the prosecution being very similar to that formerly introduced in the will contest case before Judge Clark. Several experts were on the stand during the day who testified that the handwriting in the will and that of specimens of Susand's handwriting are not the same, but that the writing in the will resemble's Mrs. Sample's handwriting. An adjournment was taken early in the afternoon, upon a statement by counsel for the prosecution that their next witness would probably require four hours for examination, the Court thereupon continuing the case until Monday next.

A TIMES reporter saw the defendant shortly after adjournment, while she was waiting to be taken to jail, and she seemed to be in great distress over her troubles. She speaks very good English, and with an apparent sincerity which is deceptive.

"I wish you would not say that I am a voodoo in your paper," she said. "If I was I would not be where I am, and have had all this trouble."

"If you had been a voodoo you think they would not have found out that you forged the will?" inquired the reporter.

"I did not forge the will," the rotund defendant retorted, quickly. "It is a shame to keep me in jail, so that I can't have a chance to get attorneys or anything else. I would have been married to Susand soon. I took care of him and he gave me the money. I feel that it is a genuine will. He handed me the paper some time before his death, and told me to put it away; that it would be of benefit to me some day. I have no money now. I gave the last $400 I had to Susand. If I had forged a will don't you suppose I would have taken more than that given me?"

"The will is not in Susand's handwriting."

"Oh, but he wrote different ways. When he was not nervous from drinking he wrote a pretty hand."

In charge of Deputy Reel, and complaining about her hard lot, the woman started away for her quarters in the County Jail.

A DIVORCES.

John K. Witherspoon secured a divorce yesterday from his wife, Maria A. Witherspoon, in Judge Wade's court. The ground upon which the decree was granted was desertion.

A divorce was granted by Judge Clark to John F. Marshall from his wife, Mrs. Lizzie F. Marshall. The ground in this case was also desertion.

John W. Broaded, one of the term trial jurors in Judge McKinley's department of the Superior Court, whose death has been announced, was a kindly and conscientious man, and Judge McKinley paid the following tribute to him after convening court yesterday morning:

"When the roll of jurors was called in this department yesterday one juror, who has been faithful in attendance during the last term, failed to answer. From the announcement in the morning papers it appears that he has answered to the call of the long roll of the highest of all Courts.

"The Judge of this department has known John Broaded for many years, and it is with sincere and heartfelt regret that he has heard of his death. He was an upright and honorable man, whose actions well earned for him the name by which he was so well known, 'Honest John Broaded.'

"A little incident connected with his service as a juror marks the character of the man.

"A few days ago he was one of the jurors upon the trial of a robbery case. The jury was out all night, and in the morning returned a verdict of guilty. Shortly afterward Mr. Broaded came to me, evidently in great distress and anxiety. He informed me that when they retired they had stood seven to five, but that those in favor of acquittal had changed over until he stood alone, and had finally yielded. He said 'I am afraid I did wrong, and I do not want to do a wrong to any person.'

"The defendant was a Chinaman, and his fate would be a matter of indifference to many men, but John Broaded, with his keen desire to do justice, knew no difference between rich and poor, strong or weak.

"An honest man is the noblest work of God.

"The Clerk will note the death of John Broaded, and strike his name from the jury-roll."

G. Antonez of Calabasas was examined before United States Commissioner Van Dyke, yesterday, on a charge of cutting timber on Government land, and was held to answer in the sum of $250. He gave the bail, and was released from custody.

BALLARDES, THE SHOOTER.

In Justice Lockwood's court, yesterday, the case of the People vs. Bellardes was called and a continuance granted until December 9th, as there are a number of witnesses in the case, and the Court did not care to begin it late Saturday afternoon. This is the case in which the defendant shot a woman named Maria A. Graham, July 20th, and then shot himself. Since that time he has been slowly recovering from the effects of his wound.

Sam Hunter, in the same court, was tried on a charge of battery before a jury, the complaining witness being Joseph Ginocchio. They quarreled about 75 cents, which Hunter owed Ginocchio. The jury returned a verdict of not guilty.

NEW SUITS.

Suit was begun yesterday in the Superior Court by the Union Lumber and Supply Company vs. Richard Zettner, Jr., et al., to secure judgment for $822.89 alleged to be due on a lumber account.

Suit on several promissory notes, aggregating $2455.11, was begun by Agar, Hamblin & Co. vs. W. H. Watkens.

Three suits to quiet the title to certain lots in the city were begun against Dr. Hiram Sinsabaugh by Mattie A. Shutt, Z. Hagerman and Peter Junius.

Esperanza B. de Abila began suit against J. Truman and a long list of defendants to quiet the title to lots in Brown & Adams's subdivision in the city, the defendants setting up a claim adverse to the plaintiff.

AT the Republican caucus in Washington, yesterday, Reed was nominated for Speaker on the second ballot, receiving 86 votes. While THE TIMES was inclined to favor Mr. McKinley for the position, there is no doubt whatever that Mr. Reed is a first-class man, who will make an excellent presiding officer.

THEY have a law in Illinois which is likely to make it pretty warm for the men implicated in the Cronin murder. It is a conspiracy law which is very comprehensive and far-reaching, having been passed to cover the case of the Anarchists. Under it, every man who can be proved to have had even a remote connection with Cronin's taking-off can be convicted of murder in the first degree.

THE simple method of treating drunkenness, practiced in Norway and Sweden, is reported to be very effective, and might be given a trial in this country. It is of a homeopathic—similia similibus curantur—nature, the inebriate being placed in confinement, and fed only with bread soaked in wine or spirits, which, in eight or ten days, creates a positive loathing for strong drink.

IT is reported from Europe that the Italian Government has found among its archives a circumstantial, exhaustive and authentic account of the martyrdom of Giordano Bruno, and will publish the documents. This is said to have caused excessive annoyance at the Vatican. The Vatican is not likely to gain much by fomenting and maintaining a quarrel with the Italian Government on historical grounds.

LO.

The Indian question is one that hardly receives the serious consideration it deserves. In the West the Indian is, as a rule, looked upon as a brute, a useless and fast-disappearing phase of humanity, and no time is wasted in false sympathy or sentiment. The Indian is a brute from our standard; but it is our duty to tame him, and that of the Government to outline the best method to accomplish this end. Policies without number have been framed, yet not so much has been accomplished as should have been. We have, as the wards of the Nation, 250,000 savages in the United States and Territories. The children from 6 to 16, who should be educated, number perhaps 40,000, and of these 15,000 are now enrolled in schools. In other words, 25,000 Indian children are growing up savages, instead of being instructed in the arts that would make them self-supporting. In California we have about 5290 Indians in charge of the mission consolidated agency, of which H. N. Rust is agent. There are for these nine day schools and two Catholic contract schools—one being at San Diego, the other at Yuma.

Mr. Rust considers that the Indians of Southern California have been ill-treated, and have not had their rights. According to the treaty of 1848—that of Guadaloupe Hidalgo—the Indians, in passing under our control, were to have all the political rights given to other dwellers upon the soil. That they have not had them is well known. Mr. Rust believes that the only way to treat the question is to educate the young people and prepare them for the citizenship of the whites; and hence he is working to build new schools to give the rising generation some educational advantages. The question should interest our people. The Indians of this country have not been treated in a manner that would commend itself to an honorable people.

POSTMASTERS AND POLITICS.

The feeling is growing among Republicans against the general and indiscriminate turning out from public offices, not essentially political, of efficient and honest incumbents solely on political grounds. A recent indication of this is furnished by the Boston Journal. The term of office of the postmaster of Springfield, Mass.—Col. Rice—is about to expire. There is no ground for his removal, except that of politics—that there are Republicans in Springfield who would like the office. Thereupon the Journal—which, it is needless to remark, is a stalwart of the stalwarts in politics—has the following to say, after bearing testimony to Col. Rice's good character:

The question now is whether the reasons which have abundantly justified Col. Rice's retention in office during the term for which he was appointed became suddenly inoperative and of no consequence when the end of that term is reached. We would not shrink from putting the question in a broader form, and asking what magic there is in a four years' limit which makes it an absolute dedication of an official's usefulness. Does the [illegible] to be impaired by the mere lapse of time? Does the fact that a man has been faithful and efficient in the discharge of his duties for four years necessarily indicate that he will be unfaithful and inefficient for the next four years? Does it not rather indicate that he will be faithful and efficient for the next four years? Does it not rather indicate that he will be faithful and efficient for the next four years? Does it not rather indicate that he will be faithful and ef

BISMARCK BLOCKED.

The Chancellor's Diplomacy in Vain.

Austria Unable to Be Friendly Toward Russia.

The Triple Alliance Decidedly at Loggerheads.

Dom Pedro Reaches Cape Verde Islands—Reports of a Movement to Restore the Empire in Brazil.

By Telegraph to The Times.

BERLIN, Nov. 30.—[Copyright, 1889, by the New York Associated Press.] The Foreign Office here has ample reason to accuse the Austrians of having broken faith regarding the recent Kalnoky-Bismarck compact. Within the present week the leading points of the entente have been set aside. Emperor Francis Joseph has annulled his decision giving autonomy to Trentino, and Count Kalnoky has authorized the Bourse to give quotations of the Bulgarian loan and has permitted the Austrian Consul at Sofia to renew its ostentatious intimacy with Ferdinand.

The check upon Bismarck's diplomacy is absolute, and has been the subject of constant communications between this city and Vienna. Count Kalnoky is reported to have offered the statement that he was forced to depart from the arrangement even at the risk of precipitating a conflict with Russia. His fourd both the Austrian and Hungarian ministers adverse to the terms of conciliation offered by Russia, and the opposition at Pesth was becoming so strong that it threatened to overturn the Tisza ministry.

Emperor William and Bismarck received the explanation in sullen silence. Herbert Bismarck wrote Count Kalnoky that the triple alliance must submit to a renewal of the dangers of the old position, aggravated by proofs of irresolutions of Austria's policy.

Premier Crisp, in a dispatch, commented upon the increased irritation of Italians over the Trentino affair. The net result of Bismarck's conference with the Czar and Count Kalnoky and their prolonged intriguing is an intensified antagonism between Austria and Russia, an irritation of Italy and a relaxation of the relations of the Dreibund.

DOM PEDRO.

The Exiled Emperor Reaches Cape Verde Islands.

LONDON, Nov. 30.—[By Cable and Associated Press.] The Portuguese steamer Alagoas, with ex-Emperor Dom Pedro and party on board, arrived at St. Vincent, Cape Verde Islands, today. An attempt was made to interview Dom Pedro concerning the events that led to his deposition and exile. He declined, however, to enter into any discussion relative to the revolution, but stated that he has been treated with the utmost kindness throughout.

The Alagoas will proceed for London tomorrow. When the steamer arrived at St. Vincent she was flying the new flag of the United States of Brazil. The flag remained flying until the Brazilian Vice Consul boarded her and informed the captain that the Provisional Government had given instructions that the old flag was to be hoisted at St. Vincent and Lisbon. The officers of the steamer, not having direct orders from Rio de Janeiro, declined to make the change. They, however, immediately sent a cable dispatch to Rio, asking for orders relative to the flag, pending the arrival of which the Alagoas flies no flag at all. The Alagoas was convoyed four and a half days from Rio de Janeiro by a Brazilian man-of-war. The war ship was much slower than the Alagoas, and the latter's passage was consequently much longer than it would otherwise have been. The Alagoas arrived in St. Vincent, after the ex-Emperor and party are well.

THE SUSPECTS' TRIAL.

CLOSING ARGUMENTS IN THE CRONIN CASE BEGUN.

The Prosecuting Attorney's Graphic Grouping of the Circumstances Against the Accused.

By Telegraph to The Times.

CHICAGO, Nov. 30.—[By the Associated Press.] At the opening of the Cronin trial this morning State's Attorney Longenecker resumed his address to the jury. He went over the testimony regarding the meetings of Camp 20, Clan-na-Gael, at which it was charged that Cronin was a spy; of Beggs's defense of Alexander Sullivan; of Coughlin trying to poison the minds of patriotic Irishmen against Cronin. Summing this section of the case up, he said: "Singular, is it not, that on the 8th day of February a motion is made for a committee in Camp 20? On the 16th of February Senior Guardian Beggs is writing about the matter to Edward Spellman. On the 17th he again writes about it. On the 19th a flat is rented at 119 Clark street. On the 20th the carpet is nailed down. On February 23d was Beggs's defense of the triangle, and on the 1st day of March this man Coughlin, who is on trial now for his life, denounces Dr. Cronin as a spy."

The State's Attorney proceeded, saying it was in evidence that Beggs reported to Spellman April 29th, saying the Cronin matter had been amicably settled, and proceeded to point out that by this amicable settlement arrangements were completed for the murder. Proceeding to trace the hiring of the flat on Clark street, he showed the connection of Burke and Kunze therewith. During this Kunze rose and said, "That's a lie."

Judge Longenecker continued to trace the story of crime, dwelling upon the various links in the chain of evidence which connected the prisoners with it down to the driving away of Cronin to the Carlson cottage, and the part the different prisoners bore in the tragedy there enacted and the subsequent disposition of the body. Coming down to the contention of the defense that the blood in the cottage was not human, the State's Attorney said the evidence all tended to show that it was human blood. Why was the floor painted if it was not? He would not take up the time of the jury to argue that it was anything else than the blood of Dr. Cronin.

In closing the State's Attorney said: "When you come to consider your verdict think of that man (Cronin) in the cottage. When you think of him there may there reverberate through your ears the death cries of that man who in his last moments called upon his God and his Jesus. Think of these men who, without giving him time to pronounce the other Trinity name, felled him to the floor with their death blows. Think of all this, and in the end there will be such a verdict that when His Honor pronounces judgment upon it, he, having his heart and eye to God, may say, 'May the Lord have mercy on your souls.'"

Judge Ring then began his address on behalf of the defense, commencing with Coughlin's defense. He referred to the vast amount of evidence produced, and the different light in which each evidence must be considered from that accorded to direct evidence. He dwelt upon the necessity that the jurors should put aside their natural prejudices against those men on account of their nationality and religion, and remember that it was natural for them to love the home of their birth.

At this point the court adjourned until Monday.

COMPARISON.

It is a word that we ask you to kindly bear in mind when purchasing

HATS, SHIRTS AND UNDERWEAR.

We are at all times willing to have the intelligent purchaser compare our goods with any reputable concern, but do not compare with Cheap John goods. They handle a different line of goods from ours, consequently there is no comparison. Our extensive business the last week proves that the public is awake to our prices and goods. The very extensive sale of

WARNER'S Famous SANITARY WOOL UNDERWEAR

THE 1st OF DECEMBER IN HISTORY.

DECEMBER takes its name from the place which it occupied in the old Roman calendar where the year was divided, nominally only, into 10 months, with the insertion of supplementary days, to complete the period required for a revolution of the earth around the sun. The old Saxons called December Winter-monat; a term which, after their conversion to Christianity was changed to Heligh-monat or Holy month, because it was the month in which Christmas occurred. For this reason among the modern Germans December is still distinguished by the epithet of Christ-monat.

POPE LEO X., celebrated for his patronage of learning and the fine arts, was the second son of Lorenzo de Medici, and born in Florence in 1475. He was appointed a cardinal in 1488, and elected Pope to succeed Julius II. in 1513. In 1515 he concluded a concordat with France, which remained in force for nearly three centuries, and gave the French King the right of nominating bishops in his own dominions. Leo's immense issues and sale of indulgences, ostensibly for completing St. Peter's at Rome, was the existing cause of Luther's attack upon the Roman Church. Leo annexed Urbino and Perugia to the Papal See, and in 1521 became the ally of Charles V. against France. He was a liberal patron of Michael Angelo and Raphael, and the founder of a Greek college at Rome. Leo X. died December 1, 1521, and was succeeded by Adrian VI.

The PRINCESS OF WALES is 45 today. She is the daughter of Christian IX. of Denmark, and was married to Albert Edward, Prince of Wales, March 10, 1863. The union has resulted in two sons and three daughters.

One of the most singular of modern female writers is MRS. SUSANNAH CENTLIVRE, who died in London, December 1, 1723. She was the daughter of an English dissenter and republican, whom persecution after the restoration of 1660 drove to Ireland, while his daughter was still young. Left poor, she resolved to go to London, and was twice a widow before she reached that city. Her first play, The Perjured Husband, was produced in 1700, and it was in her Wonder, or a Woman Keeps a Secret, that Garrick made his farewell to the stage in 1776. Pope gives her a line in his Dunciad:

"At last Centlivre found her voice to fail," for writing a ballad against his Homer before she had read it.

ANNA COMMENA, daughter of the Emperor Alexis I., of Constantinople, was born December 1, 1083. She was remarkable for her learning and beauty, and wrote an account of her father's reign, which, though somewhat pedantic in style, possesses great historic value. In 1118, on her father's death, she endeavored unsuccessfully to raise her husband, Nicephorus Bryennius to the imperial throne. Anna Commena died in 1148.

EMPEROR ALEXANDER I. of Russia died under suspicious circumstances on December 1, 1825. All of the princes of the house of Romanoff are said to have died by violence, and Alexander I. is no exception to the rule.

Probably the most remarkable of book collectors and bibliomaniacs is RICHARD HEBER, the sale of whose immense libraries opened in London December 1, 1834. Heber inherited a large fortune which he spent in purchasing books. He would sometimes travel 200 or 400 miles to purchase a [illegible]. He used to say that [illegible] should have three copies of a book—one for a show copy, one for his own use and one to lend to his friends. His country house was nearly all library, while his town residence, where he died in 1833, was filled with books from top to bottom, while he had thousands of volumes stored in houses rented for the purpose in London and in various cities on the continent. Strange to say, at his death he left no provision for the preservation of his library, which was variously estimated to contain from 150,000 to 500,000 volumes. It was never ascertained how many books he possessed, as his executors did not know in how many foreign towns his collections were placed. The auction sales realized $290,000 for what had cost Heber $385,000, the books sold numbering 117,613 volumes. Heber's life was therefore a useless one, as he merely performed a work which was undone at his decease.

One of the most curious episodes in the history of the stage is that of the "Young Roscius," WILLIAM HENRY WEST BETTY, who was born near Shrewsbury, England, in 1791, and made his first public appearannce in London, December 1, 1804. At the age of 11 he learned by heart the parts of "Rollo," "Young Norval," "Osman" and others high in public favor at that time. He appeared in Belfast, August 1, 1803, as "Osman," with great applause. The Drury Lane and Covent Garden theaters had a desperate competition to secure the juvenile wonder, the former succeeding. The theater was jammed to suffocation, nothing like it being seen before or since. The play was Barbarossa, in which Betty acted the part of "Selim." Nothing could be heard in the first act owing to the tumult, but when "Selim" appeared in the second act, the audience gave up their frantic noise for equally frantic admiration. During 28 nights the Drury Lane Theater averaged over $3000 a night, and in 56 performances the boy earned $150,000 for the managers. He soon retired from the theater and sank into obscurity. When he became a man he appeared on the stage again, but utterly failed to "draw." "Young Roscius" and Mr. Betty were two entirely different persons in the public estimation.

SMILES.

Young Widow: "Mr. Preachly, will you marry me?" Mr. Preachly: "Well, really, Mrs. Buckner, this is so sudden, and——" Young Widow: "Oh, well, take your time to think it over. Mr. Harkins and I thought we'd like to have you perform the ceremony for us."—[Harper's Bazar.

Mose Schaumburg, Jr.: "Vader, a shentlemans vants to know if dot unshrinkable undershirt don't shrink a leedle, anyvay." Mose Schaumburg, Sr.: "Does dot shirt fit him?" "No, it vas choost a leedle too pig." "Of course it vill shrink. Vy don't you have some heads for pishness?"—[Texas Siftings.

The American Coursing Club of Great Bend, Kan., which by long experience in running down jack-rabbits with greyhounds, has made itself competent to tell a winning gait at sight, has indorsed Chicago as the place for the World's Fair. The other candidates for that big show may well withdraw their claims.—[Chicago Morning News.

Attendant (at the Metropolitan Museum): "Are you looking for anything in particular?" Uncle Rube: "Y'is, sah; I is. I heered tell dat dey wuz some ob d' ole mastahs a-stoppin heah, an' I fought whah I'd look in an' see if ole Mars Ogietho'pe ob Gale's plantation, Georgy, had arrived in town. I ain't got eyes on him sence sixty-fo'."—[Puck.

This beautiful book is the most practical work of the kind that has ever appeared, and will be a welcome addition to the library of every lover of fine needlework. Miss Smith has had long experience in artistic needlework, and in this volume she has lent generously and freely the results of her study and labor in this fascinating department of art.

She has illustrated her work by means of COLORED PLATES, each one of which is made directly from the piece of embroidery which it represents. On one page of the book she shows an outline pattern of the leaves, and on the opposite page is a beautiful COLORED PLATE showing the pattern as it appears after it has been properly worked. This plate shows the exact colors that were used in doing the work, and the outline pattern is lettered and numbered, and the author gives full directions for working the colors.

THERE ARE EIGHT OF THESE COLORED PLATES, AS FOLLOWS:

Autumn Leaves, Tulips,
Yellow Daisies, Morning Glories,
Golden Rod, Thistles, Wild Roses, Pansies.

Any lady can master the beautiful art of embroidery in colors without any other instructions than this valuable book gives. THIS WORK IS PRINTED ON HEAVY TINTED PAPER and is bound with beautifully illuminated cover. It is such a book as ordinarily sells in book stores for $2, but because it is a volume especially adapted to the needs of every household we have put the price within the reach of all.

THE rain could not have been better timed.

THE rain is worth $50 to every man, woman and child in Pasadena.

THE country will look like a garden tomorrow, not that it did not yesterday.

THE military company matter is now settled. The State gives the uniforms, $1200 for a hall, $150 for an armorer and now the men should come to the front and give us the crack company of the State.

THE establishment of a nursery at the Raymond by the celebrated Hovey, of Boston, means that the hotel will be the center of a flower festival the year round. It is intended that every known flower shall be grown here, and the most expensive hot-house roses will be literally thrown to the guests by the bushel.

IN South Africa the ostrich-feather business is ranked next to that of the diamond in importance, and vast sums of money have been realized from the birds. In this issue we call attention to the industry in Southern California to bring out if possible what stands in the way, if anything, of making it a like success right here in Pasadena. We have been told that the ostrich is less liable to disease than chickens; that it attains a great age, and that the climate is perfectly suited to it. If this is so the industry should increase in value, and we should be able to put ostrich feathers and lips into the New York and London markets as reasonably as the South African breeders. If our tariff is not high enough to protect the American industry it can, upon judicious presentation of the case, be made higher. So important a branch of business certainly demands the attention of capitalists.

THE question of keeping Sunday is one which forces itself upon the people more and more. Eastern people, and by this is meant those residing in the Middle and New England States, as a rule observe the Sabbath day according to the strict letter of the law. In New York there is not a theater open for pure amusement on this day, and outwardly the shops and stores are closed. In the towns and cities it would require some temerity to play a game of tennis, croquet or ball; and those who indulge in it would not escape serious censure. In fact, the people yet believe in devoting the day to the [illegible] guide for Christians. If they are asked why they do it they will tell you that personally they have no objection to the poor laborer who works hard during the week enjoying himself in a proper way; but they consider it best to bring up their children to respect the day, and they propose to do it. As the tourist comes west, if he be "strict" in these matters, he is shocked a little to find that he can go to the theater in Chicago, and from there on matters grow worse, in his estimation, in this respect, until in California, where some of the old towns look upon the day as a public holiday. It is church in the morning and base-ball in the afternoon. Pasadena being made up of eastern people, and church-going western ones, is old school in this respect and believes in the strict observance of the day—not to go around looking sanctimonious, but to spend the day in the way you want to see your children spend it after you are gone. A horse race, a game of ball or a hunt would not be much of a success here the first day of the week. These are the questions that are growing more and more pressing, and the people must decide them; but it is a very significant fact that the father who goes fishing or goes to see a base-ball match on Sunday is no less strict in seeing that his little ones spend the same time in Sunday-school.

ALMOST A SUICIDE.

A Young Lady Attempts Her Life—Temporary Insanity.

Miss Grace Jarvis is one of the best-known young ladies in the city, a social favorite, and the center of a large and warm circle of friends, and when it was reported on the street last night that she had taken a dose of strychnine with suicidal intent, it created no little excitement. Miss Jarvis is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Jarvis of Elevado drive, and while many rumors flew about, nothing could be traced that could be traced that was sufficient cause for such a deed except mental aberration, and the TIMES reporter was assured by the parents and the doctor in charge that, while an unfortunate affair, it was simply the result of a nervous strain; in short, a case of acute hysteria of very common occurrence. The attempt upon her life was made after dinner, and the young lady had one convulsion before it was discovered. Then her father went for a doctor, and in a short time Drs. Mohr, Philbrook and Gray were in consultation, and by continued hard work, succeeded in saving her life, though she had several convulsions after they came. It can be said that she is out of danger. In conversation with a reporter, Dr. Philbrook, the family physician, stated that the young lady had been complaining for several days of a pain in her head, and being of an extremely nervous organization, she had attempted her life while laboring under temporary mental aberration as described.

The Board of Trade will hold its regular monthly meeting on Tuesday evening of this week. The meeting will be one of more than ordinary importance, as at that time the tax matter will come before the board, and a full attendance is desired.

THE OSTRICH RANCH.

BIRDS OF A FEATHER—A LIVING BY OSTRICH TIPS.

The Outlook in Pasadena—What Can Be Done With the Birds—Monster Eggs—A Chance for Capital—Ostrich Statistics.

Pasadena has possessed an ostrich ranch or farm for several years. It lies northwest of the city, on the edge of the Arroyo Seco, about a mile and a half from town. Here a number of the big birds are kept and encouraged, affording entertainment to those who happen to hear of the farm and go out. The ostrich ranch consists of a big corral, divided up into smaller ones, the outfit being not especially elaborate, and not as large as the well-known farm at Anaheim, which was started some five or six years ago, and which, we understand, might have been made to pay.

The ostrich-farming movement was originally started in this country by Capt. Chas. T. Sketcheley, an old hand at the business in South Africa. Having been cleaned out by the natives there several times, he determined to try it here, and as a result of his endeavors the California Ostrich-farming Company was started in 1883. Capital stock to the amount of $30,000 was available, and, with 22 birds as a nucleus, the work began.

The points that served as encouragement were these: It was known that at least $40,000,000 was invested in the business in Cape Colony alone, not to speak of the Orange Free State, Natal and the Transvaal. It was also known that $7,000,000 worth of feathers were sent out from here every year, one-half of which came into the American market, upon which we paid a duty of 50 and 25 per cent. for raw and undressed feathers. The proposition was then: If America buys $3,500,000 worth of feathers every year, and the birds will thrive in Southern California, why cannot the home market be supplied with home productions? And this same proposition faces capitalists today.

We have here just the conditions, as far as can be found, that the birds require. The writer was assured by several experts that there was absolutely no menace to the birds, and those that were lost were from purely accidental causes. We know that there is money in it, as statistics show how many feathers are used, and that the industry ranks next to the diamond in value in South Africa. The first attempts at introducing the industry here were discouraging. The African Government was prepared to prevent any opposition. It imposed an export duty of $500 on birds of any age, and even the eggs were subject to a duty of $125 apiece.

This did not deter the dealers, and the birds were brought here at an expense; it was understood, of over $1000 apiece. The Pasadena farm is but a beginning. The original one at Anaheim comprised about two hundred acres, and was arranged in every way for the accommodation and convenience of the birds. About one hundred acres was sown in alfalfa and used as pasturage for young birds, and it was estimated that it would support about 2000 birds. The breeding birds—the males and young at various ages—were all divided off and are at the Pasadena corral in pens. When there are a dozen birds, the amount of food consumed is something amazing. The breeders are fed twice a day, and each bird will eat about 40 pounds of cut alfalfa, besides corn, vegetables, broken shells, etc., etc. During the past summer some baby ostriches have been exhibited at the ranch, attracting no little attention. The mother bird scratches a very shallow hole, about four feet in diameter, with her claws, and in this she lays from 14 to 16 eggs, which are hatched out by the male and female in turn; the female sitting by day, the male relieving her by night. In 42 days the young appear, curious little creatures, looking as if covered with wire, and rather prettily marked.

The parents take great care of them for a month or so; then they are generally separated, as the mother is ready to lay again. On some of the farms artificial incubation is tried, and if the eggs are taken from the nest regularly, the bird will lay from 20 to 30 eggs, or 90 during a year, which shows where a profit is possible. The 90 eggs, if collected and weighed at the end of the year, would give 360 pounds of eggs; many being 18 inches in circumference. During the breeding season the cocks are particularly savage, and would kill a man easily; so, when entering the pen, the men generally use a long stick with a crotch, and as the bird rushes at them they catch it in the crotch, so holding it back. A bird has been known to kill a horse by a single kick, and natives are often killed in this way by them. When enraged and powerless, the male settles down upon its knees and throws its head from one side to the other, uttering a curious sound; and at such times discretion is the better part of valor. Some time ago a lady was leaning over the fence of the ranch, when a bird came softly along, and with one swoop bore away her bonnet, thinking it a flower garden, probably. The writer once saw a bird snatch a green veil from a lady's head in the East, and afterward attended the post mortem, the poison in the veil killing the bird.

What makes ostrich-farming so alluring is the richness of the general outlook. One bird lays, say 80 eggs a year, or a first-class pair of breeders will produce from 50 to 70 chicks per year. These will begin to lay when they are about 4 years old. Like everything else, there are set-backs. Some birds are not good breeders; others are sterile; of course something is to be expected; but at the same time it is known that some of the largest breeders in Africa today began with two birds. The young thrive well here, and the speed with which they accumulate is something astonishing, and shows that when managed well there is money in it.

The birds are plucked every six or seven months; the men either driving them into pens or rushing in and holding them, taking their chances of being killed.

Each fully grown bird is supposed to produce about 25 white plumes, valued at from $2.50 to $3. The young birds are picked first, when six or seven months old, and then seven months later. These first pickings are not especially valuable, but at two years their feathers may safely be valued at $2 apiece, and when three years old they are at their best. Now, it is known that the ostrich will live nearly if not quite 100 years; so the enthusiast can in a very short time, on the figures given, figure out a fortune on paper. No one has yet made a fortune in Southern California in the business, and it is not fair to say that it has not been given a fair test. Capt. Sketcheley told the writer some three or four years ago that the eastern dealers did not encourage the enterprise as much as they might, at least this is the interpretation that was put upon his remarks, and possibly they have some reason for it; but it would seem if, as claimed, that Southern California is much better adapted for it than South Africa, that there was money in the business for Pasadena. The ostriches are interesting objects and attract many spectators among tourists. Their appearance when being followed is very curious, and their speed can be realized when it is known that they have a stride of 22 feet.

They are often tamed, and in South Africa it is a common sight to see a dusky child riding about on one, and a race was run between two mounted birds some years ago in France. The male bird utters a "bromming" sound that resembles the roar of a lion and can be heard for two or three miles.

A Sad Case.

The charity organization held a meeting yesterday at which President Buchanan reported upon two cases of destitution now in charge of the society. Bed clothing, particularly blankets, are badly needed, and any charitable persons having such articles to give can leave them at Foster's book store. In one of these families, two men, father and son, are dying with consumption. Clothes for a boy of 14 years are also wanted.

CHURCH NOTICES.

Mrs. Watson discourses at the Universalist Church tonight.

At the Church of the Angels, San Rafael ranch, Garvanza, the afternoon service will be at 3:15. Rev. T. W. Haskins of Christ Church, Los Angeles, will officiate.

Rev. Mr. Conger will give this morning his fifth discourse on the voices in Nature, the subject being, "The Language of the Trees." In the evening at 7:30 Mrs. Elizabeth Lowe-Watson will speak on immortality. Subject: "Our Future Home."

PERSONAL.

Dr. W. T. Channing goes north tomorrow on a visit to friends in Seattle.

Mr. Gordon W. Treadwell is at Mrs. Dexter's for a few days before leaving for Phœnix, Ariz.

Mr. and Mrs. C. W. McCandless and Miss Wotkyns arrived on the Australia from Honolulu Friday.

CITY COUNCIL.

IMPORTANT MEETING OF THE CITY FATHERS.

Bills and Business—The New Engine-house—Chief Hentig Resigns—The Public Library—An Ordinance Calling an Election.

The Council met in regular session yesterday morning. All present except Trustee Young.

After the reading of the minutes of the previous meeting the regular order of business was taken up.

The following bills were examined and referred to the Committee on Auditing and Finance: George D. Webster, $2368.93; George D. Webster, $1208.93; Johnson & Ford, $2.60; C. W. Buchanan, $300.55; J. H. Cambell, $37.15; J. W. Vandervoort, $93.33; R. Malony, $400; Chaplin, Tower & Co., $3.50.

The placing of extra hydrants was left to the Fire and Water Committee, to carry out the instructions of the board.

Councilman McLean said he thought it a good idea to attach one hydrant to the Lake Vineyard mains for the purpose of making it a test case in the courts.

President Throop suggested that, in his opinion, it would be a good idea to read communications in the early part of the session instead of at the close, as frequently these communications were of importance and should be acted upon at once.

A communication from J. W. Vandevoort was read, offering the city the rental of the City Hall and jail lot for the period of three years for the sum of $2340, agreeing to build a substantial brick vault, similar to that in the San Gabriel Valley Bank, in the building on the acceptance of the bid.

A communication from Wood & Banbury was read asking the privilege of erecting a post for the purpose of hanging a sign. Referred to Committee on Fire and Water.

The residents of North Marengo avenue petitioned for an electric light at the corner of Villa street and Marengo avenue. Referred to Committee on Streets and Alleys.

The resignation of R. Hentig as Chief of the Fire Department was read. The reason given was sickness in the family and the necessity of removing from the city. Resignation accepted and M. Turpet, Assistant Chief, was appointed to the charge of the department, to receive pay of Chief of the department while acting in that capacity.

George Miller made application for the appointment of driver of the fire engine. Referred to the Committee on Fire and Water.

William H. Dorsey made application for the position of driver of the hose cart. Referred to the same committee.

The Clerk read a communication from Miller of South Pasadena, that a document in his possession was worthless unless Mr. Miller acknowledged his signature before a notary, which that gentleman refused to do.

In the matter of settling with the Fosmir Iron Works, for hydrants, was referred to the Committee on Fire and Water.

A communication from J. H. Gale and George G. Walker of Buffalo requested the payment of rent on the jail lot to C. C. Brown. Referred to Committee on Finance.

A communication from Mr. Holmes asked what inscription was wanted on the bell, in order that it might be sent to Garrett & Co. of San Francisco. Referred to Committee on Fire and Water, with power to act.

A bill from the First National Bank to the amount of $4067.60 was presented. This sum is the amount due on the sewer farm which was loaned to the city. The bill was ordered paid.

The City Attorney was instructed to look up the matter of the title of the sewer farm, which at present, it is thought, rests in the name of Edson Turner, trustee.

The Superintendent of Streets, J. W. Vore, submitted a communication concerning the improvement of Park avenue, in which it was stated that 200 feet of flume was necessary. The improvement was recommended, and the matter referred to the Committee on Streets and Alleys.

President Throop suggested the necessity of putting in a sidewalk and curb in front of the new firehouse. Referred to Committee on Fire and Water, with power to act. The expense as stated by Mr. Vore will be about $60.

Mr. Vore also reported that all street work ordered by the board had been finished.

Councilman McLean suggested the necessity of grading the lot on which the engine-house was built, in order to obtain necessary drainage.

Chairman Throop said that a hydrant at the engine-house was necessary for the purpose of washing the fire apparatus. Also referred to the Committee on Fire and Water, with power to act.

A communication from C. W. Buchanan, supervising architect of the new engine-house, stated that the house was completed, and recommended its acceptance by the city. The report was placed on file until the matter can be investigated.

A number of bills, including that of George D. Webster for the amount of balance due on account of construction, were referred to Committee on Auditing and Finance.

Councilman McLean announced that Mr. Buchanan was ready to exhibit his fire alarm to the Council at any time. The apparatus was in place in the Council chamber.

Mr. Hillier, who had offered to put in a fire-alarm system for the sum of $1000, asked the privilege to withdraw his bid. Granted.

There was considerable discussion concerning the manner of calling and conducting a municipal election on the matter of the Public Library, for the purpose of making it a public institution, to be owned and operated by the city.

Attorney Polley read a skeleton ordinance relative to the library matter, which caused considerable discussion. After filling in the "blanks" the ordinance was placed upon its passage, and the Council adjourned.

The North Pasadena Reading Circle meets on Friday evening next, at the residence of J. A. Buchanan, when the subject of discourse will be "Tennyson."

ATTENTION, COMPANY!

Pasadena Gets a Company — The South Gets Five Companies.

It will be good news to the many friends of the military company here to know that the matter is settled, and Pasadena is to be represented in the National Guard—and that she will be represented well goes without saying.

There will be 12 companies in the brigade, which gives five new companies—one for Pasadena, one to Riverside, one to Santa Ana and one to San Diego (already organized) and one to either Santa Barbara or Ventura. This will give Southern California a fine representation in the National Guard of the State.

The Pasadena company should be made up at once, and there is no doubt but that enough men will be found to make it the largest company in the guard. The company must have 53 men, this being the minimum number—50 being privates, with a captain and two lieutenants. The men enlist for three years, and take the legal oath. The men have very light duties, being obliged to drill but twice a month, but, of course, can indulge as many times as they feel inclined. The State pays for the uniform of the men, provides arms of the finest pattern and gives Pasadena $1200 per year for an armory, and $150 per year for an armorer to care for the guns, etc. The officers have to buy their own uniforms, swords, etc., which will cost about $100. The men have to devote 12 days to muster or encampment each year, during which time they are paid for services and given transportation. The State also provides for one annual target practice. The General in command of the First Brigade is E. P. Johnsen, the Colonel is W. H. H. Russell, and it is believed that Maj. Gilchrist, who has been greatly interested in the movement, will be the choice of the men here for captain. The Major is a fine disciplinarian, an old soldier and would produce a good company. There will be a meeting for drill at Gilchrist Hall, West Colorado street, Monday night, December 2d. A full attendance is desired, and it is to be hoped that the full number of 100 can be made up then. Pasadena can and will produce a crack company, and it should be a strong social organization as well. The armory will have a fine club room, reading, billiard and smoking rooms, and the boys should make their annual ball and reception one of the great social events of Pasadena. The movement can be made a big thing for Pasadena, and there is no doubt but that it will be a success.

FROM THE BOARD OF TRADE.

A Communication Which Will Explain Itself.

The following communication from J. A. Buchanan of the Board of Trade is intended to correct an impression which has gained considerable credence by reason of an article which appeared in the Tribune a few days since:

PASADENA, Nov. 30, 1889.

[illegible] your correspondent in this place has been misled in regard to the relation of the Pasadena Board of Trade with the placing of the telescope on Mt. Wilson, we respectfully ask space to place the matter in its true light before the public. All will remember the visit of Prof. Pickering of the Harvard University, Prof. Clarke of Cambridgeport, Mass., and other scientists to Pasadena last winter, and the banquet that was given in their honor at the Carlton Hotel. At that banquet Prof. Pickering proposed to place their 13-inch telescope on Mt. Wilson, if the citizens would guarantee its transportation to the top of the mountain.

A committee of two of the leading citizens was appointed, with instructions to name a committee of five to take the matter in charge, and I believe the next day the following gentlemen were selected as the committee: Col. Pitcher, Judge Magee, Dr. Channing, Clarence Martin and T. P. Lukens. These gentlemen were selected because of their known ability, as well as for their interest in science.

Judge Eaton volunteered his services to the committee to take the telescope to the top of the mountain, and his proposition was accepted.

The Board of Trade had nothing to do with the banquet, the appointment of the committees or any matter connected therewith; in fact, no more than one of the churches of Pasadena or the newspapers of the county. On the other hand, it was a citizens' affair throughout.

Now a word for the Board of Trade.

During the summer a number of tradesmen and laborers called on the board for settlement of unpaid claims connected with the transportation of the telescope. The board requested the committee to meet it and make a report of the collections, expenditures and the deficiency. This request was made two or three times, but for some reason the committee failed to make a report or meet the board. While we as a body had no supervision over the matter, we were willing to assist the committee in settling the unpaid bills.

While we don't seek this medium of advertising one good deed, justice demands that we say that a few members of the board have given their time and money freely in all enterprises for the good of Pasadena, and many bills have been paid that the citizens, outside of a few members of the board, have not contributed to. To take a subscription paper before the public, no matter how laudable the object, is not a pleasing task, and not infrequently one's reputation may sometimes be smirched by some driveling, penurious idiot, who talks loud but never gives.

As there has been a good deal of notoriety in regard to the matter, and the general public well knows every one connected with it has aided in good faith, we can only say in conclusion, as Tennyson said on another notorious occasion, "Somebody has blundered."

J. A. BUCHANAN.

BREVITIES.

No news in the police courts yesterday.

No washouts of consequence with the rain of yesterday.

Fred Marsh, who came up from Alamo last week, will return to the mines tomorrow.

Mr. and Mrs. B. L. Riggins have taken the Burbank Villa for the season. They do not leave Pasadena permanently, but for the season only.

A series of foot-ball games are promised for this week. The boys will have a surgeon on the ground hereafter. How they escape alive is a matter of much interest.

Every train from the East now brings in tourists and families who have come to stay. The reporter heard an eastern gentleman remark yesterday that he could stand eastern winter weather pretty well until January, and then he wanted to come to Southern California, and in his opinion any one who could leave the East and didn't do so for the purpose of spending the winter here was very foolish. He said, further, that this section of the country was in time destined to become as thickly populated as many of the New England or Middle States.

THE RAYMOND.

Late Arrivals—Pleasures and Pastimes—Sunday at the Hotel.

The recent arrivals at the Raymond appear on the register as follows: Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Gould, Boston, Mass.; Frederick E. Ayer and wife, Pomona; Edward W. Patton, Buffalo, N. Y.; S. A. Crawford and wife, Hamilton, Canada; Miss Groenendyke, Pasadena.

NOTES.

On Friday evening a pleasant party assembled in the parlors for the purpose of playing the favorite game, progressive euchre, under the auspices of the Card Committee, Mrs. Harding, Mrs. Maynard and Mr. Charles A. Scharff.

There were seven tables; the play was skillful and created much interest. Two sets of prizes were offered, which were won by Mrs. Fairbanks and Mr. Webb, and Mrs. Ayer and Mr. Gibson respectively.

Last evening the merry-makers indulged in the harmless but very amusing game known as "bean bags." It was discovered to be an excellent way to pass a rainy, unpleasant evening.

This morning many of the guests will attend divine worship at the various churches, the weather permitting, and some may visit various points of interest about the city.

In the evening a praise service will be held in the music hall. Gospel hymns and sacred songs are chosen for these occasions, and to the lovers of sacred music are one of the most pleasant features of life at the great hotel.

GREAT REDUCTION in price of felt hats for the next 30 days at Mrs. Ella Black's, No. 6 North Fair Oaks avenue.

A b[illegible] rel, at the Wells-[illegible] of Main and Eighth [illegible] of-[illegible] had been placed near [illegible] the partitions, in which hot ashes had been emptied. This blazed up and caught the partition, but the fire was extinguished before any serious damage was done.

Barnum Blake, a resident of Los Angeles for the past 14 years, died at his place of residence, Bellevue Terrace, yesterday afternoon, after a lingering illness of softening of the brain. He was formerly a resident of Chicago, where he was largely interested in shipping. He was the owner of Bellevue Terrace and other valuable properties in this city. He leaves several children to mourn his loss.

It is reported that Tony Quick, a barber, who has been doing business at No. 20 North Spring street, has mysteriously disappeared. He leaves his father-in-law, Mr. Piute, to pay a note of $300, on which he is an indorser, and it is also said that he made off with $150 belonging to the Society of Sons of Hermann. Gambling is assigned as the cause of his downfall. He took his barbering implements with him, and will doubtless make a new start in some more congenial field. His wife, to whom he was married not long ago, has returned to her parents.

DR. M. HILTON WILLIAMS

Specialist in Diseases of the Head, Throat & Chest,

ALSO ALL

Chronic Diseases of the BLOOD, etc.

OFFICE—37 SOUTH FORT ST., Between First and Second streets, Los Angeles, Cal.

OVER 100,000 cases treated during the past 23 years. All diseases of the respiratory organs treated by the most improved MEDICATED INHALATIONS and the OXYGEN TREATMENT, which has such a wonderful reputation in the East.

OXYGEN antagonizes and thoroughly removes every poison of the system from the blood, no matter from what cause it exists or how long it has continued, and is efficacious in the cure of Catarrh, Throat Diseases, Asthma, Bronchitis, Consumption, Nervous Prostration, Insomnia and Dyspepsia, etc., together with any poisoned condition of the blood.

In all cases of catarrh and other diseases of the Respiratory Organs, where the system suffers from the deleterious effects of scrofula, or other vitiated condition of the blood, local treatment is invariably conjoined with constitutional remedies.

Persons desiring treatment by this system of practice can use the remedies at home as well as at our office, and which will cause no inconvenience or hindrance to business whatever.

I have seen so many of these cases cured that I do not consider any case hopeless unless the disease has advanced to the chest and both lungs are seriously involved. The inhalations aid us in dissolving the mucus and in connecting and healing the cavities, which nothing else can do with the same success.

The very best references from those already cured.

Those who desire to consult with me in regard to their cases had better call at the office for examination, but if impossible to visit the office personally, can write for list of questions and circular, both of which will be sent free of charge. Address

HOLIDAY TRADE!

In All Lines of Fancy Articles.

It will pay you, before making a single purchase, to thoroughly inspect the two largest floors devoted to the sale of Dry Goods in the city. It is a well known fact that we are headquarters for all kinds of goods devoted to Art Work, and we carry the only complete line in the city. Where so many kinds of working material is carried it is necessary to carry full lines of colors in all kinds of goods. Our assortment of colors in Satins, Plushes, Velvets and Silks is thorough and complete, while our Ribbon Department shows everything that is on the market in shades and colors. This fact is known far and wide, and these departments always command a crowd from morning till night. There is scarcely an article in the Fancy Goods line that is not represented in our present stock.

I ran across a little bootblack the other day who is as whole-souled and genuine a little chap as one often meets with. Billy is his name. Billy has coal black eyes, and his head is covered with close-curling rings of black hair; his mouth is a regular cupid's bow, but it is rosy red, and his dark cheeks show a bright flush of crimson through their olive-tinted smoothness. But Billy prides himself on his pure English blood, and his mamma proudly claims that there is not a taint of any other in the family stock.

That little mamma lives in a two-roomed house with no helper but Billy. And a brave little rustler is he. He sells papers; he blacks boots; he runs on errands, and if a chance offers he will hold a horse for a dime while a lady runs into make a call or do a little shopping. He lives on the street during the day, but evil influences do not seem to touch him. There is not a bit of the hoodlum element in his nature. He never swears, and you could not entice him with a cigarette.

"Billy," said I one day, "how is it that you never learned to smoke or chew, and that you keep your lips so clean from bad words?"

"I reckon I'll tell you," said he, "though it's summot I don't talk much about. I remember when we lived in London. We had a nice cottage with a little patch of garden about it—'twas out not so far from the country, ye see, and father was that proud of it, and mother used to sing all day like a bird, she was so happy like. Well, father was hurt one day in the streets, and they brought him home, and before he died he said to me, 'Billy,' said he, 'take care of mother when I'm gone, and be a man, Billy; don't use no bad words, and be good to your mother.' Well, I said I would, and I'm just trying to be a man as hard as ever I can," said Billy, with pride, "and now mother just 'pends 'tirely on me."

"That's a brave boy, my lad," said I. "And how much can you earn a day, Billy?"

"O, I never makes less than 50 cents, and sometimes I earn a dollar more. But no matter what happens, I'll stick ter being a man."

Ah, how many such heroes, whom the world knows nothing of, have we in our midst fighting life's battles? "I'll stick ter being a man!" There is a moral Napoleon grander than the hero of the French people, and mightier and nobler than the Alexander who conquered a world.

A sadly befuddled individual was clinging to a letter post at the corner of Fifth and Olive streets a few evenings since. While there a street car came along, which was evidently observed by his beery eyes, and with that car before him he made a slight movement, waving one hand in its direction and with the other clinging more closely to his support. As the car moved along, the idea seemed to take possession of him that he was aboard it all right; and fumbling in his pocket he drew forth the necessary nickel for his fare, lifted the lid of the letter-box and dropped it in; then, with an air of the most supreme content, the boozy biped leaned against the post, closed his watery eyes and dropped off into a half slumber. It was a beastly picture.

There is a man here in Los Angeles who is the prince of prevaricators. He can lie right straight along by the rod, or the mile, with the celerity of chain-lightning. In story telling, it is his ambition to let no one get ahead of him. He was listening to a pretty fishy yarn the other day, one whose tendency was to make one's suspicions rise to the perpendicular, and I noticed the twinkle astir in his eyes, and he began to scratch his head and move about uneasily in his seat. But when the narrator had finished, he started forward and said:

"I can go you one better than that, stranger."

"Well, if you can, let's have it," responded the other.

"All right. Well, I was out hunting a week or two ago. Had my dog Jack with me. Well, Jack, now's the finest dog for the chase in the whole country. We'd just started up a coyote, and while the critter didn't seem to be laying himself out any, I could see at last that he was gaining on us. At that I gave the signal to Jack, put the spurs to my horse and off we went like a streak of greased lightning. But right in our path was a tree, and Jack got to running so fast that he couldn't stop, and he ran right into that tree so swift it just split him clear in two lengthways."

"That was bad," said the stranger, "and of course your dog was used up then?"

"By no means," responded our Angel City truth dispenser. "I just hurried along and clapped his two sides together again, and off we started after that coyote."

"And did he run well?" asked the stranger.

"Better than ever, sir; better than ever, by a long shot," was the response, "for ye see, when I clapped him together I was that hurried lest the coyote should get away that I didn't notice how I'd put the thing, and was laid up 52 days by a wound from a Texan spy, whom he arrested. In 1865 he was one of the escort of Acting-Vice-President Foster, on his trip to treat with the Navajoes; and in June of the following year took part in the famous fight against the Comanches east of Fort Sumner. Here his horse stepped in a prairie-dog hole while charging, and fell on him, mashing him frightfully. He got his discharge soon after.

In 1865 Hank married a Mejicana in Santa Fé, and after leaving the army was variously employed as miner, interpreter, scout, keeper of the Government corral at Santa Fé, acting agent of the Utes for four and a half months, driver of the paymaster's ambulance, etc. In 1874 he went to Washington with Agent Arny and the delegation of Navajo chiefs—the two Mannelitos, Kiahtonito, Mariana, Narbone, Tenesusi, Barbasueres, etc. On the return Hank got drunk at Chicago and fought like a madman. Arny "bounced" him, and Hank went back to Washington and got Arny removed.

Then he went down to Elizabeth, N. J., to see his sisters, and turned railroad brakeman. His sister quarreled with him, and he returned to St. Louis, arriving there with 10 cents in his pocket. Here he joined Barnum's circus, but quit it at Peoria and went to binding oats. Then he went up to Sigourney, worked two weeks as laborer on the Rock Island; beat his way to Burlington and Montrose; worked two months on the Des Moines Canal; quarried rock; was a section hand; rejoined Barnum at Keokuk, and was with him a long time; at Leavenworth got into a fearful fight and had all his front teeth knocked out with a rock; quit the circus and drove a wagon in Keokuk all winter; joined Cole's circus; at Carthage "licked" the chief canvasman, and at Quincy his assistant, and quit the show; struck Keokuk again with 50 cents, worked a day, and beat a freight to Plattsmouth, Neb. He was some time in Nebraska, farming, and in 1880 was sent to Liverpool, England, by a rich invalid. It was a proud journey for Hank. They wanted him to enlist in the British army, but he said: "No petticoat government in his," and returned to America and Nebraska. Here he saved a little money, and soon lost it all in raising sorghum. In 1884 he was attacked by one Greer, and shot him in the shoulder. After his acquittal he returned to New Mexico and his wife, from whom he had been absent nine years. Since then his wanderings have been confined to New Mexico and Colorado. He is now [illegible] about Abiquiu.

For all his rough life, Hank is a good-hearted fellow, no one's enemy but his own, brave, loyal, and of speech as picturesque as his history.

REED AND M'KINLEY.

A Practical Politician's Tactics Played on Both of Them.

Referring to the Speakership, the details of a very amusing incident have recently cropped out, says the Washington correspondent of the Kansas City Times. It seems that Mr. Reed and Mr. McKinley met accidentally somewhere, and commenced bantering each other in an apparently friendly way concerning their chances for the Speakership. Maj. McKinley remarked, among other things, to Mr. Reed that he could not carry the entire delegation from his own section, which assertion Mr. Reed vigorously denied.

"Why," said Mr. McKinley, "I know of a member from Massachusetts who will support me for the Speakership."

"Name him," demanded Mr. Reed.

"Certainly," replied Maj. McKinley, "Mr. Morse will vote for me," referring to "Rising Sun Stove Polish" Morse, recently elected from the Second Massachusetts District, formerly represented by ex-Gov. Long.

"I guess not," retorted big Tom Reed, who, running his hand down into a capacious inner pocket, drew out a letter from Mr. Morse, which read about as follows:

Dear Mr. Reed: I am happy to inform you that you are my choice for the Speakership and I shall cast my first vote for you, and in this connection I assume that you will be glad to know the committees on which I desire to serve.

To this was appended a list of important committees on which the "stove polish" member wished to be placed.

"What do you say to that, McKinley?" ejaculated the Maine statesman.

A supercilious and significant smile was observed at this juncture to irradiate the Napoleonic features of the Ohio champion of a high protective tariff. Throwing back his manly chest, Maj. McKinley dipped down into his side pocket and pulled out a bundle of letters, from which he selected one marked with a red cross which bore the business suprescription of the "Rising Sun Stove Polish" statesman.

"Read that!" exclaimed McKinley, flaunting the letter defiantly before the eyes of the Brobdignagian gentleman from Portland. This letter, subscribed by Mr. Morse, read about as follows:

My Dear Maj. McKinley: I will be forced by circumstances to cast my first complimentary vote for Mr. Reed, but you are my choice for the Speakership. Hence on the second and succeeding ballots I shall vote for you. I assume that you will be glad to know the committees on which I desire to serve.

Here followed an exact reproduction of the list of committees indicated by Mr. Morse in his letter to Mr. Reed.

"Well, I swow!" exclaimed Tom Reed in good, old-fashioned down-east dialect. The joke was too good to be lost on either, so the two rivals shook hands over the episode. Each one carefully folded his letter, reinserted it in the envelope and put it away carefully for future reference. Meantime the thrifty "stove-polish" salesman remains in blissful ignorance of the discovery of his attempt to "whipsaw" the Speakership "turn," and reposes fondly in the belief that, come what may, he will be named for his favorite committee memberships.

The Nevada papers are predicting a beef famine. The Reno Gazette says that there are but 50,000 cattle on the coast, against a demand of 85,000.

IN HIGH LATITUDES.

A JOURNEY FROM LOS ANGELES TO ALASKA.

North from Sitka—The Davidson Glacier—Brilliantly-colored Mountain Sides—Fort Wrangell—Juneau—Fishing—Difficulties of Gold-mining, etc.

STEAMER GEORGE W. ELDER (Alaskan Waters), October, 1889.—[Special Correspondence of THE TIMES.]—At midnight, after leaving Sitka, the ship anchored at Kilisnoo, on Admiralty Island, to take on freight. This place is chiefly known through the vast quantities of herring taken here, although cod is likewise plentiful, and of late some attention has been directed to the manufacture of cod-liver oil at this place, which industry, when developed, may do away with the shipping of quantities of dog-fish oil under that name, as has been done at points along this coast.

Unless there is freight to be taken on at Kilisnoo and the Chilcat canneries, the ships return from Sitka without touching at these extreme northern points, in which case the tourist misses some of the finest scenery on the trip—the passage of Chatham Straits and Lynn Channel. Nature has dismissed all her softness of mood here; she shows her face grave, solemn, inflexible; too busy operating her vast glacial forces to deck out the stern mountain walls with verdant forests, or to enliven their solitudes with the music of leaping cataracts. The bare, cold, forbidding mountains rise up precipitously from the fathomless tides, and through their every pass and defile the glacial rivers extend. It is a rocky, desolate, inhospitable land where soaring eagles and spouting whales give the only sign of life. We sailed between Chicagoff and Admiralty Islands, entering Chilcat inlet about noon. Some time before we had passed the Eagle Glacier, 1200 feet in height, and tiny glaciers had become too monotonous to attract any notice. But all hastened through lunch to be on deck as we passed the Davidson Glacier, which is next to the Muir in interest. We approach very close to this, and have a fine view of the mighty river falling in frozen cascades for hundreds of feet. Its main channel is about half a mile in width, but widens out to one and a half miles, spreading like a fan, as it nears the water; but it terminates in a long moraine, more than a mile in width, and heavily overgrown with timber, many trees being over 100 feet in height. The melting water of the glacier flows off at either end of this moraine, which will in time become an island, when the sea shall have worn a channel between it and the glacier. A future tourist sailing up this channel, amid the crash of falling icebergs, may perhaps echo the recent writer on Alaska, who, having passed through all the sublimity and grandeur of this region, informs those who seek her pages for some description of its scenes, that she found it "quite satisfyingly arctic."

After passing this great glacier the mountains on the left assume an appearance quite different from any we have beheld. Their feet are washed by the tides and their heads encircled by clouds [illegible] their coloring is somewhat [illegible] scribe in words. [illegible] orable height [illegible] moss and chaparral of every imaginable tone of green, broken by patches and seams of gray rock. Above the green slopes the rocks were colored as if painted. All reds and purples and grays and blues an artist's fancy can conjure up are there, blotched with vivid greens and chrome, splashed with orange and broken with great patches and seams of snow from which tiny cascades were streaming down the worn channels on the mountain side. It is as if some Titanic painter, tired of the Arctic coldness of the landscape, had mingled his colors on a gigantic palette, and smeared them, in fantastic glee, on the broad surface of the mountain wall. Ahead, they seemed to meet the mountains from across the channel and bar our further progress, but as we advanced they parted to show a silver bay hidden away between them, with a tiny island rising like a pyramid from the water, covered all over with velvety, green moss, standing guard at the entrance. This is Pyramid Harbor, and on one side the channel is a cannery of the same name, and on the other the Chilcat and Murray canneries. There was a great quantity of freight to be taken aboard. We anchored in mid-channel and a stern line was taken to shore to steady the ship and keep her from drifting, while another line was taken to the first cannery by means of which the rafts laden with salmon cases were pulled hand over hand to the ship. The remains of a wharf is seen at the upper cannery which was destroyed within a year by the action of the toredo, which is said to be quite as destructive here as in the tropical waters. Toward night rain began falling with indications that the unusual fair weather was over, and we were to have a taste of the ordinary Alaska weather.

The following morning we awakened to find the rain falling in a softly persistent way. That put an end to all hopes of going ashore in the small boats. The mountains had quite disppeared in mist and the vision extended no farther than the low hills on either side, which were covered by low, straggling timber, mostly evergreen; but dashes of bright yellow foliage here and there had brightened it on yesterday. This lasted all day. Now and then the clouds would lift to show us the dim, gray outlines of the painted mountains of the day before, then drop down again like a thick gray curtain. At times even the woods on shore seemed far away and dim through the mist and rain, and the Captain said he often went through here in winter when either shore line was invisible, and sometimes in whirling storms of snow. The wind blows with terrific force through the channel, which is too deep for safe anchorage, and squalls are not infrequent. When the weather is threatening, the Captain said he sometimes pulled out without waiting to load, as the safety of the ship made it necessary to seek broader waters in a storm. The Indian village of Chilcat is located a short distance up the channel from where we were anchored, but we were unable to visit these remarkable natives. Like the Hydahs, they are considered superior to most of the other tribes, and are a fierce, war-like, but sagacious, people. They have a talent for commerce, and for many years would not permit the Indians of the interior to trade with those of the coast, or with the white traders, except as they acted as middle men, and shared the profits of the transactions. They also knew for many years, and kept secret, the art of forging copper, which metal is found in the interior, so that the old copper implements and bracelets scattered along this coast are of Chilcat origin. They, too, weave the curious dance-blankets, which command fancy prices from curio-hunters. It is said that often an entire year is consumed in the weaving of one of them. It was among these remote people Mr. and Mrs. Willard were, at first, stationed as missionaries, until one of the natives had two children die. The shamins, or medicine men, attributed the failure of their incantations to effect a cure to the fact of their having been bewitched by the children of the missionary. The law among all these natives is a tooth for a tooth, blood for blood, life for life. Learning of their intention to offer up his children as a sacrifice, Mr. Willard secretly escaped with his family in a canoe, and have, quite naturally, been transferred to another field of mission labor.

All day we lay at anchor in this wild and picturesque channel, walking the wet and slippery decks, watching the raftsmen unload the salmon cases, and gazing at the mighty panorams of the winds and clouds, which we would not have exchanged for the sunshinest of days. The changeful shadows, the gloom and mystery seemed exactly suited to the spot. Toward evening the clouds lifted, the sun struggled out for an hour, and that vision of wild water, of wilder mountains wreathed with ghostly mists, of giant, wintry peaks showing through rents in blackened clouds, and of one blue and silver glacier, high up among the loftiest peaks, illumined by a burst of sunlight into a radiant, restful spot in a turbulent, wind-smitten, storm-swept world, made up a never-to-be-forgotten picture, blotted out too soon by a night of storm and darkness.

Some time during the night we were awakened by the motion of the ship. The wind and water were roaring like demons, and the captain issuing rapid orders to the sailors on deck. Knowing the dangerous character of the channel, we felt some little apprehension for a time, but the good ship went on steadily, and at 11 a.m. next day we touched for an hour at Juneau, which seemed quite a familiar spot. In the afternoon we crossed the channel to Douglas Island once more, and at 9 p.m. were again sailing homeward in darkness, wind and rain, through a sea of liquid flame.

The following day the ship touched at Fort Wrangel for them all, and then moved around the point to a cannery near the mouth of the Stickeen River, where we were taking on freight until after midnight. In the interval between showers the passengers amused themselves by fishing over the stern for the tides, until 4 o'clock next morning, and daylight found us at Burrough's Bay, 40 miles from Loring. Here we were to take on 6000 cases of salmon from a cannery, where not a boat had called since April. At dusk it was not yet all on board, and the fog so thick we could not leave the shelter of the bay till daylight. Some of the passengers began to grow impatient at the weather and the long stops at canneries, and it was decided that each evening we should all meet in the Social Hall to entertain each other with music, song and recitations; also that a daily paper should be published on board until the end of the voyage, subscription price 25 cents, the proceeds to be given to a little blind girl on board, who was being taken to San Francisco by her mother for treatment. This promised to furnish recreation. The paper, of which four editions were published, was called the Midnight Sun. It was "published by the editors and edited by the publishers." It had the entire company as contributors to its columns, and was necessarily original, since there were no exchanges to copy from, and no news had reached us on shipboard for nearly a month. It occasioned much diversion and furnished an interesting souvenir of the journey. One of its conundrums might be appreciated by some of the bedraggled tourists of the past summer: "Why is Alaska like a monarchy? Because it has a continual succession of reigns (rains)." With such social features we cheered the tedium of two days of rain until the third brought us within the limits of Victoria's confines once more. Alaska and rain were left behind. We passed Greenville channel in clear weather, and enjoyed for the last time the lovely reflections of its quiet depths, and rolled once more through Queen Charlotte's Sound. Then came packing and the writing of letters to be mailed on arrival at port. At Port Townsend we stopped some hours to discharge freight, and then, without any stop, we went, as rapidly as the ship could take us, to Tacoma. Here, in the gray dawn, were hasty leave-takings of new-made friends. At 7 a.m. we were on board the train on the Northern Pacific Railroad, headed for the twin cities of the great Northwest—the Northwest, east of the Rockies—and familiar sights took the place of the mystery and majesty of all the long northward journey, which was over, and already a thing of the past.

PORTIA.

Caught a big one.

We called next morning at Kasa-an Bay, on Prince of Wales Island, where we took on a quantity of salted salmon in barrels. This would be a pretty spot in fine weather, but seen through a drizzling rain, had no particular attractions. Many of the passengers defied the weather and went ashore in the small boats, coming back laden with moss and berries. Here we talked with a prospector, who is interested in a new gold mine some 40 miles up the Stickeen River. He said there was an abundance of quartz there which assayed $500 a ton; but it was like most of the precious deposit in Alaska, located in so remote and inaccessible a spot as to render the mining of it a difficult matter. At present the ore is packed down the mountain on mules, brought to Fort Wrangel in small boats, and thence shipped to the smelter at San Francisco. Just at sunset of this day we sat, enveloped in a gossamer and warm wraps, on the bridge of the ship to watch the fine effects of sunlight and fleeing mist as we sailed once more into pretty Lake Naha Bay for a last call at Loring. A rainbow sprang from the base of the wooded bank at one side and dropped into the water on the opposite bank, the arch framing in the upper end of the bay, with its rude little settlement in the woods against the great green mountain, with a wrecking ship lying at the wharf and the Ancon lying on the fatal rock at the left of the picture. The background of trees showed plainly through the prismatic transparency of the rainbow, which was most vivid in its colorings; even its fainter reflection would have been considered a very respectable bow of promise in an ordinary landscape. We were glad of this vision of the rainbow with its cheerful suggestions, else we might have come away from this third visit to Loring, doubting if the sunshine ever dispersed the clouds and mist from this shadowy nook in the mountains, or if its singing waterfall in the forest were ever approached except through mud and rain.

We lay at anchor in Naha Bay, waiting for the tides, until 4 o'clock next morning, and daylight found us at Burrough's Bay, 40 miles from Loring. Here we were to take on 6000 cases of salmon from a cannery, where not a boat had called since April. The Times.

LAY SERMONS.

We were wandering on the uplands the other day when we came across a tiny wildflower. How perfect was its texture; how fine its coloring; and how sweet its faint breath of perfume! It lifted its fair face to the sun, which smiled down upon it. Into its heart its warmth penetrated. There was a drop of dew lying like a diamond upon its breast. It was sufficient to quench its thirst, since its tender roots the rain of a few days previous had moistened and nourished.

That little wildflower! How steadily it kept its face lifted to the sky! It never looked earthward. If the wind bent it, lo, as soon as it had passed it stood erect again upon its frail stem, still gazing sunward.

Beautiful shower! how like the Christian is it—the Christian whose life is sunned by faith, and about whom sweeps the atmosphere of divinest hopes. The storms of life may beat upon him; the strong winds of adversity blow; but still does he ever turn his face to the Sun of Righteousness, and refreshed by his beams and by the dews of divine grace, the fragrance of his holy purposes fill the atmosphere that he breathes.

There is a great deal more in living Christ than in talking Christ. There is no force on earth so powerful as a consistent, earnest Christian life.

There are unbelievers who declare that they have no faith in Christianity; who aver that it is a sham and a delusion; but they are false to themselves, perhaps unconsciously, when they declare this.

Not long ago a lonely traveler, who acknowledged no Divine Father, and who declared that Christianity was fit only for women and children, was traversing a wide and almost uninhabited plain in the great West. He had lost his way, and as the twilight deepened about him he looked about him, but saw no sign of human habitation. A storm was gathering, with fitful flashes of lightning, and the mutterings of the approaching tempest. He put spurs to his tired and jaded horse, and rode onward. At length through the darkness he caught sight of a gleam of light, toward which he hastened. As he neared it he perceived that it came from the window of a rude log house. Of the occupants he knew nothing, but "anything," he thought, "will be preferable to braving the rage of the oncoming tempest." So he hastily dismounted, led his horse to the shelter of a shed, where he fastened him securely, and then sought admission for himself at the house. The door was opened by a tall man, not less than six feet in height, clad in rough garments, and whose keen, black eyes were overshadowed by a pair of shaggy eyebrows; and whose face was more than half concealed by a thick, heavy growth of beard. Half hesitatingly the traveler entered, wishing meanwhile that he had kept on his journey. Seated by the fireside, strong, stalwart youths, looking hardly less formidable than his host. The men were silent, talking but little; but the wife gave him a good supper, after which he was asked if he would not like to retire. Weary with his long ride, half overcome with fear, yet anxious to conceal his suspicions, he answered that he would, for, thought he, when by myself I may be able to plan some way of escape, or find some means of self-defense if they attack me. The host led the way and showed him to a loft above the room where they sat, in which was a chair and a comfortable bed. Bidding him good night, he left the traveler to himself. With a feeling almost of despair he sat down and hid his face in his hand, cursing himself for his folly in stopping at that lonely house upon a solitary plain, beyond the reach of succor if danger should assail him.

But hark! What was that he heard below? The family had gathered together. They were all in the room beneath him. He heard the voice of his host, and there was no mistaking his utterance. Never sounded a voice so sweet to him. Never was rolled more swiftly from mortal heart its burden of fear and its dread of danger. He moved softly, and through an open space in the loosely laid floor he saw the man with his family about him and on a rude stand by his side was an open Bible. O, the beauty and the sweetness and the power of the words that he read:

"The Lord is my Shepherd, I shall not want. He maketh me to lie down in green pastures, He leadeth me beside the still waters. He restoreth my soul, He leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for His name's sake. Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil; for Thou art with me; Thy rod and Thy staff they comfort me. Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies; Thou anointest my head with oil; my cup runneth over. Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life, and I will dwell in the house of the Lord forever."

O traveler, though you affirmed that you believed not in Christianity, you were no longer afraid. At once you prepared for rest, and laid down without a thought of danger under this stranger's roof and sleep until the morning light dawned, and the gold of sunrise streamed in at your window. But you were an honest man, and seriously and thoughtfully when you wakened did you put this question to yourself: "If there be nothing in Christianity, if it has no restraining and no purifying influence upon the life, why was I not still afraid when I heard the voice of my host reading that psalm? Why did I feel so safe as I heard him kneel in prayer and commend the stranger to the care and keeping of his Heavenly Father? I will be honest with myself, and I will seek to have a personal faith in that God whom my humble friend below so devoutly worships."

Into all of our lives may such faith come; in all our hearts may there be found such honesty of purpose. Let us be sincere with ourselves, and, if doubts trouble us, let us seek to discover if within our hearts there be not yet faith sufficient to strengthen us against unbelief.

STATE AND COAST.

"The farmers are jubilant" some more.

The treasurer of the Golden (N. M.) School Board has resigned. He signed his name with an X.

Tramps are becoming numerous in San Luis Obispo. The more in the chain-gang the better.

It has been arranged that Ike Weir, the Belfast Spider, and Billy Murphy shall fight in San Francisco on December 27th.

Julia Ward Howe lectured on "Greece Revisited" in San Francisco on Thanksgiving day. To lecture on that subject in Chicago would be more appropriate.

J. F. Cronover committed suicide at Juneau, Alaska, on November 9th by shooting himself with a rifle. He left letters stating that his father and brother live at Marble Falls, Tex.

According to the Santa Barbara Independent each cow on the Goleta creamery ranch nets its owner $90 a year, and it finds that one acre of land will support an animal for that space of time.

If Adam and Eve had lived in San Diego they would never have known what a fall was. We only have spring and summer.—[San Diego Union. There were no railroads in the Garden of Eden, either.

It is said the best crop raised this year in North Dakota has been mortgaged. The crops have failed there three years in succession, and the brave farmers are destitute. Another instance of Southern California blessedness.

The Chinese of San Francisco to whom several invoices of goods, including a number of obscene toys, were consigned, will resist the action of the collector in seizing them, and will demand the decision of a jury in the matter.

An Indian council is called at the Puyallup Reservation to decide whether the right of way to build a railroad from Sumner via Puyallup to Tacoma and along the waterfront to Brown's Point shall be granted. Last March a council refused the request.

The Fronterzo says that the Mexican authorities have soldiers, both regular and national, stationed on the line to prevent the Indians who killed Sheriff Reynolds and Deputy Holmes from crossing. The civil and governmental officials are alike on the alert.

Under the new law now in force in New Mexico all justices of the peace, constables, school directors, and mayordomos of acequias are to be elected on the second Monday of January of each year, and enter upon their respective duties the first Monday in February following.

May Wilson, a little Calaveras girl, last July in a coal-oil explosion, was roasted from the hips to and across the shoulders. She is now at Stockton receiving her first medical treatment. A spongy growth has formed on the back, and curvature of the spine has resulted from frequently leaning forward to seek relief from pain.

Two young men of Victoria, B. C., amused themselves by putting on false beards and trying to stand up a friend as he was coming home at a late hour. He knocked one of the boys down, and kicked him in the face so hard that he will be maimed for life. The other fellow will be taken before a police magistrate, who will fine him for his fun.

Under the new army orders recently issued post traders are forbidden to sell whisky except in original packages. Canteens are to be established at various posts, where cold lunches can be had with beer or wine to wash them down. These are to be maintained by the Government, special details from the troops being made as beer keepers. This arrangement knocks out the profits of the post traders' business.

A San Diego Producers' Union.

[The Sun.]

The idea of a producers' union should not be allowed to lapse. Money paid out for food will not remain at home until the farmers can be sure of a market here and the commission men of a regular and reliable supply. No better service can be rendered San Diego, short of bringing in a new railroad, than the establishment of such a union. Let's have it!

She Loved Him.

The gushing bride of a few weeks kicks over the traces and makes things extremely lively for Dear Charlie. Divorce proceedings next in order, because hubby did not go to coltons furniture exchange, two hundred and two south spring street, to buy their furniture. She would not live with him.

Mrs. Graham's Cucumber and Elder Flower Cream!

HAS MARVELOUS POWER TO SOFTEN, WHITEN, bleach and purify the human skin. It is prepared from the milk of almonds, the juice of the cucumber and the purest elder flower water, and is an exquisite toilet preparation, neither greasy nor clammy, and by its purifying and healing qualities it renders the skin beautifully soft, pure and of satin-like texture and bloom, keeping it free from wrinkles and preserving its youthful appearance unto old age. For cleansing the face from cosmetics or other impurities it is vastly superior to soap and water, vaseline or other preparations. It cures chapped lips or hands and roughened skin, and prevents tan and freckles. It should be on every lady's dressing case.

CHEAP GROCERIES

Why does F. J. SMITH, Central and Vernon avenues, sell goods cheaper than any other house in town? Because he owns his building and has no rent to pay; has no loss on bad bills, and his daily expenses do not exceed $3, while other stores have to add 5 per cent. for loss on bad bills, and their daily expenses are $7.50 to $8 per day. This, you see, enables him to sell cheaper than his competitors possibly can without a loss.

The Raymond Hotel.

The Raymond, East Pasadena.

AMONG THE ORANGE GROVES OF THE BEAUTIFUL SAN GABRIEL VALLEY, 8 MILES FROM LOS ANGELES.
C. H. MERRILL, Manager (during the summer season manager of the Crawford House, White Mountains, N. H.).
If you cannot go out to the Raymond and spend a day, a week, or a month, or the whole season, then go out and stay a few hours. It is well worth your while to see the magnificent view from its piazzas; and that view alone will well repay you, although there are many other interesting features—especially the grand display of flowers in the hotel grounds, which are now under the charge of Mr. C. H. Hovey, the celebrated landscape gardener, formerly of Hovey's Nurseries, Cambridge, Mass. Tourists visiting Los Angeles should make a trip to The Raymond, even if their stay there must necessarily be brief. There are frequent trains between Los Angeles and The Raymond by several lines of railroad. The orchestra consists of four soloists, who render the choicest of music twice each day. A very complete livery is connected with the hotel, and it is an excellent starting-point for a drive through the San Gabriel Valley, in which are situated the San Gabriel Mission Church, Rose's winery, Lucky Baldwin's stock farm, the Sierra Madre Villa, and many other places of interest.
Full particulars regarding board and other matters can be obtained by addressing C. H. MERRILL, Manager of The Raymond, East Pasadena, California.

Turnverein Hall looked more inviting than one would believe that bare parellelogram could look last Friday night at the first of the three Assembly balls of the season. The white and admirably-stretched canvas reflected the lights overhead and brought out the colors of the dresses, and even added a shine to the broadcloth of the gentlemen. Very wisely, no flowers had been used in the decorations, to wither early in the evening and pine on the stem. Simple festoons of cedar draped the wooden railing of the balcony, and on the stage were potted ferns, big and little, and plenty of graceful foliage plants, massed together in varying shades of green. Upstairs the small tables were set with pretty china and quantities of fresh-cut flowers. The supper of sandwiches, coffee and ices was light, but varied enough for any feminine caprice and substantial enough for the masculine appetite. A few minutes after 9 the dancing began at the call of the whistle and went on bravely through the 16 numbers of the dancing card, and ended exactly at 1 o'clock, no extra dances being permitted. Meine's Band provided the music, which was unusually good, especially as reinforced by the 'cello after the theater, and under Mr. Meine's own direction. The badges of the Floor Committee were dainty bits of hand-painted satin, and were amply earned and deserved by their possessors, Messrs. M. S. Severance, James Slauson, Dr. R. R. Dorsey and Mr. John Shumacher.

Mrs. Alfred Solano, the third member of the Reception Committee, was ill and unable to be present.

What with the dispersion of the guests to the gallery to look or sit out a dance, or to be served at the tables, the floor was at no time overcrowded, though never with any unfilled spaces. These details are after all but the accompaniments of the social spirit that makes an assemblage pleasant, but they add more than is suspected to its fervor. The atmosphere of a ballroom, socially speaking, tells at once of its success, and that of the first Assembly was plainly one of enforced enjoyment.

Following is a list of those present: Reception Committee, Miss F. Wills, Mrs. M. S. Severance; Floor Committee, Messrs. Severance, Slauson, Dorsey and Schumacher; Mr. and Mrs. Creighton—Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Ellis, Mr. and Mrs. Fleishman, Mr. and Mrs. Holterhof, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Bonsall, Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Millar, Mr. and Mrs. Preuss, Mr. and Mrs. Pridham, Mr. and Mrs. Parris, Mr. and Mrs. E. Plater, Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Slauson, Dr. and Mrs. Utley, Mr. and Mrs. Van der Leck, Mr. and Mrs. Vocburg, Mr. and Mrs. H. U. Vail, Judge Van Dyke and daughter, Mrs. John Ellis, Mrs. M. D. Lummis, Mrs. de Szigethy, Mrs. Boardman, Miss Hoyt, Mrs. Capt. Booth, Mrs. M. L. Wills, the Misses Wills, Briggs, Mullens, Browne, Gephard, Merrill, Dunn, Waddilove, Stoneman, Dorsey, Clemmons and Bradbury, and Messrs. Bucknall, Hobart, Brown, Chadwick, Jardin, Lester, W. E. Jones, Austin, Bishop, Christopher, Dr. E. Cole, Lieut. Grierson, U.S.A., P. Hoyle, Dr. Dorsey, J. E. Hunter, T. D. Mott, Jr., J. W. Montgomery, Charles Pickler, E. C. E. Mackey, Lieut. Meyler, U.S.A., Boyle Workman, Gay Wilshire, Dr. Le M. Wills, Latham and C. D. Willard. Mrs. Senator Jones and party of Santa Monica, and Dr. L. M. Radebaugh of Pasadena. The date of the second Assembly is December 27, 1889.

MYSTIC SHRINE ENTERTAINMENT.

The Nobles of the Mystic Shrine gave a most novel entertainment Friday evening in Masonic Temple, on the corner of Spring and First streets. The members of the order gave a burlesque of the secret work of the order, written by Maj. W. A. Elderkin, of Gen. Grierson's staff. There were a number of ladies and invited guests present and the burlesque was hugely enjoyed, especially by the ladies. At the conclusion of the farce the doors of the banqueting-hall were thrown open and refreshments were served. An interesting programme was carried out by Mrs. Mamie Perry-Davis, Miss Florence Perry, Miss Cora Foy, Sig. Modini and Walter McQuillan. Among those present were the following: Judge J. D. Bicknell and wife, Mr. and Mrs. Hervey Lindley, Mr. and Mrs. C. T. Rice, Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Weldon, Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Russell, Mr. and Mrs. D. G. Dexter, Mrs. C. H. Wiswell, Senator T. J. Parcels, Mr. and Mrs. M. Biscailuz, Mr. and Mrs. S. P. Jewett, Mr. and Mrs. L. Thorne, Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Walkers Mr. and Mrs. Niles Pease and daughter, Mrs. St. George.

A CRAZY TEA.

The crazy tea given Tuesday at Campbell Hall, by the Ladies' Aid Society of the East Los Angeles Baptist Church, was a success both socially and financially.

The furnishings of the supper table were unique. Supper was served from 6 p.m. to 9 p.m.

The following programme was very creditably rendered:

Piano duet—Misses Kennedy and Connor.
Recitation—Miss Bessie Moore.
Piano solo—Miss Stella Lowe.
Recitation—Miss Catherine Pierce.
Piano and flute solo—Prof. and Miss Connor.
Solo—Mrs. Matthews.
Orchestral trio—
Solo—Mrs. H. White.
Piano duet—Misses Swint and Frick.

Among those present the following were noticed: The Misses Hall, Gertie Hall, Maud Gregory, Flossie Gould, Hudson, Formeda, Riddle, Mitchell, McCullum, Berschig, Grace Lowell, Peachy, Corbett, Pierce, Emmy, Frick and Stephens, Mr. and Mrs. Tinker, Mr. and Mrs. Philips, Mr. and Mrs. Stockwell, Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Cole, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Gregory, Mrs. C. W. Gregory, Mrs. Rowley, Mrs. Woodbury, Mrs. Greenman, Mr. and Mrs. F. K. Boyer, Dr. and Mrs. Morris, Dr. and Mrs. Moore, Mr. and Mrs. Loosemore, Mr. and Mrs. Chase, Mr. and Mrs. Boswell, Mrs. Bennington, Mrs. Bodman, Mr. and Mrs. Bradley, Dr. and Mrs. Blackington, Mr. and Mrs. Dubarry, Mr. and Mrs. Harry White, Mr. and Mrs. Dyer, Mrs. Kimball, Mr. and Mrs. Vogan, Mrs. Nickel, Mrs. Powell, Mrs. Harrison, Mrs. Hall and Mr. and Mrs. J. McGraw, Messrs. Peyton, Gould, Dr. Pierce, Entler, Riddle, G. A. Courvorsier, Clinton, Groff, G. Peachy, Bowman, Lapp, Mitchell, Webster, Lowell, Sallee, Grimes, McLane, Smith and many others.

A SURPRISE PARTY.

The friends and relatives of Miss Lou Lane gave her a surprise party Tuesday evening, it being the celebration of her eighteenth birthday. About thirty young people gathered at the residence of Charles Dixon, No. 231 Hawkins street, East Los Angeles, at 7:30 in the evening, and soon headed for Miss Lane's residence on Park avenue. The young lady was not at home, she having gone out to spend the evening, but she was soon found and invited to return to her own home, where she was surprised in the most approved style. A musical programme was carried out, after which the guests indulged in games, etc., until midnight, when a lunch was served. Among those present were Misses Jennie Cooper, Daisy Edwards, Dora Ropert, Mamie Wilkinson, Louie Irish, Lulu Atherton, Clara Field, Cena Dixon and Mary Ebert, and Messrs. M. H. Cilley, C. M. Rolfe, C. H. Bott, Walter Bott, James Riddick, John Hassett, Will Shaw, Frank Frary, Charles Dixon, Bert Foster and C. H. Wilkinson.

ROSEDALE CLUB BALL.

The first anniversary ball of the Rosedale Social Club, held Thanksgiving night at its hall, 512 South Spring street, was a grand success, both in point of attendance and in the social enjoyment of all those in attendance. The members of the club had made every arrangement for the comfort of their guests, the hall being finely decorated for the occasion and a splendid orchestra provided. Elegant and costly souvenir programmes were furnished to all. The grand Rosedale novelty march, under the leadership of C. Chick, the secretary of the club, elicited much applause from all in attendance. On the 14th of December the club will give its second party. It will be a masquerade in which many novel features will be introduced.

THE CHESTERFIELD CLUB.

The party given by the Chesterfield Club, Friday evening at the Bellevue Terrace, was one of the most enjoyable affairs of the past week. Everything had been nicely arranged for the occasion, and the music furnished by Arend's orchestra inspired all present to enjoy the occasion to the fullest. The following were present: Mrs. Lehman, Misses Chanslor, Smith, Tufts, Wilson, Stout, Morrison, Carran, Fracker, Orr, Brymer, Grace Brymer, Jordan, Davis and Seamans, Messrs. H. C. Lehman, W. Cosby, D. R. Collins, A. W. Allen, A. W. Wilson, F. L. Forrester, Joe Chanslor, A. H. Busch, Michener, M. Hellman, C. M. Baker, P. Martin, L. Nordlinger, J. F. Blake, E. B. Tufts and L. D. Sale.

YOUNG MEN'S INSTITUTE.

Notwithstanding the many other parties held, the entertainment and dance of the Young Men's Institute No. 36, held Thanksgiving night, was a grand success. A choice literary programme was given in the early part of the evening, consisting of an address by President E. J. Robertson, an instrumental solo by Miss Popplewell; vocal solo, Mrs. M. M. Kannon; address by Rev. Father O'Reilly; vocal solo, Miss M. Cowper; address, W. A. Ryan; vocal solo, Miss G. Reeve. The entertainment was followed by a social dance. This is the first of a series of entertainments to be given from time to time during the winter.

A BIRTHDAY PARTY.

A birthday party was given to John Zobelein last Friday, the occasion being the 20th anniversary of his birth, at the residence of his sister, Mr. Cortes, Boyle Heights. The following guests were present: Mr. and Mrs. Zobelein, Mr. and Mrs. Cortes, Mr. and Mrs. Luentzel, Mr. and Mrs. Gonzales, Mr. and Mrs. Peschke, Miss Matilda Zobelein, Miss Josie Knell, Miss Clara Paynter, Miss Lula Paynter, Misses Arzaga, Misses Gonzales, Miss Teill, Miss Tannie Knowles, Miss Emma Knowles, Miss Elvira Knowles, Prof. Knell, Messrs. A. Knell, S. Gerson, E. Gerson, J. Leventhal, O. Stark, Teill, A. Metzkow.

NOTES AND PERSONALS.

Friday evening A. C. Neighbor and Miss Nellie Ulry, both of Downey, were united in marriage at the Grand Central Hotel. Among the guests present were A. C. Thomas, George W. Raymond, Miss Wilson, Mrs. Willey, Miss May Thurston, of Downey. The best man was T. J. Keys, Jr., and bridesmaid, Miss May Thurston.

A number of Herr Arnold Kuttner's German students assembled Wednesday evening in the parlors of the Church of the Unity for a conversational evening. The programme consisted of German songs and recitations by Mrs. Ackerman and the Misses Keyes, Hall, Fremont and Hagan assisted in a manner creditable to them.

The Mutual Protective Philharmonic Society will give its first grand ball tonight in the Montague block, Upper Main street.

Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Patrick, who have been visiting in the East, have returned home.

Mrs. Capt. F. E. Brownell of Washington, D. C., and her daughter, Miss Harrington, reached Los Angeles on Wednesday last, and expect to remain for the winter. They are visiting Mrs. E. L. Betts and Mrs. L. F. Scott at No. 17 Loma drive.

A most enjoyable Thanksgiving dinner was given by Mr. and Mrs. V. F. Vignes at their residence, corner Hawkins and Alta streets, East Los Angeles. Among those present were the Rev. Fathers Harnett and Genier.

Wednesday noon, at the Church of the Holy Angels, Mollie O'Brien of Little Rock, Ark., and E. J. Farrell of Los Angeles were married. The interesting and impressive ceremony was performed by the Rev. Father Grogan. Those present consisted of friends of the bride and groom. After congratulations the happy couple left for San Francisco. Mr. and Mrs. Farrell will be at home, at 423 Bellevue avenue, after December 16th.

Lawrence M. Anderson was united in the holy bonds of matrimony last Tuesday to Miss Tillie B. McNitt. The ceremony took place at the residence of the bride's parents, on Lincoln street, the Rev. Mr. Jones of the Christian Church officiating. After a sumptuous repast the happy couple took the Santa Fé train for Coronado, where they will spend their honeymoon.

The following guests are at the Hotel Metropole for the winter: Col. Charles F. Smith, William Lacy, G. R. Shatto and wife, Thomas Pascoe, Dr. and Mrs. Gillingham, William Lacy, Jr., J. W. Long, H. W. Syres, A. M. Warren, Col. Henry Lippharth and W. Whitney.

Invitations are out for the anniversary hop of the Maids of Arcady on the 6th inst. It will take place in the California Social Hall.

J. D. Bosch has taken unto himself a better-half. The ceremony took place at 624 Flower street Wednesday night.

Miss S. Klein and Miss L. C. Hume of Oakland, who have been visiting friends in this city, returned home the other day.

Tuesday night the guests of the Argyle gave a domino party. There was a large attendance and a good time was had.

S. B. Hynes and family, who have been living at the Bellevue Terrace, have gone to housekeeping on Ninth street.

At Alhambra.

Mrs. B. C. Lattin has returned from an extended tour in the Eastern States in season to partake of Thanksgiving dinner with her overjoyed family.

J. H. Shankland, Esq., and son came out from Los Angeles Thursday, and, after a hasty glance at the work on their new house, with gun in hand sought out game to slew and to slay, as is the American custom on Thanksgiving day.

A joyful party of twelve drove down to El Monte Thursday evening, to partake of a supper prepared and served by the ladies of the Presbyterian Church in that neighboring town.

The dinner spread at the Hotel Alhambra, Thanksgiving day, was unexceptionably fine, even for this hostelry de perfection. In addition to the social gathering of families, the hunt that had been in progress brought a large number of strangers who were pleased to swell the throng that went to make up this bright picture of contentment and jollity, that feasted among fruit and flowers, a scene only possible in California on Proclamation day.

The ladies of the M.E. Church, evidently in possession of a fairy's wand, transformed the main floor of Johnston's block in an attractive dining-hall, graced with flowers, and alluring tables laden down with a dinner that would make a New England housewife turn green with envy. The attendance was admirable, keeping the fair ladies busy from 12 until 8, countenances meantime beaming with one continued smile.

The union service at the new Baptist Church was largely attended on Thanksgiving morning. The sermon, by Rev. Mr. Larkin of the Methodist Church, was listened to with fixed attention, causing thanks to arise from every heart present, and bringing out the great interest that has been maintained by Evangelist Reed during his labors in this church for three weeks.

The hunt came off on Thursday, according to advertisement, making it a gala day for this town. The vicinity of the bank building at 11 o'clock was a scene of vehicle exhilaration and equine excitement that would put Broadway and Wall street to the blush. The Mayor was absent on account of preoccupation of the city incorporation in the Supreme Court, but the city was free to all, and right royally the freedom was enjoyed.

In the vivid comparison of the luxuriant Pullman car with the prairie schooner, so was the comfortable condition of the game to be hunted on this day with their to be pitied ancestors. The coyote, a pet, reposed quietly and contentedly in its owner's lap, two long-fondled foxes slept peacefully in a buggy bottom, and the wildcat possessed a satisfied look in a little boudoir box. So far as the game was concerned, the hunt was a success, as they obeyed their hunters implicitly. The coyote, when stopped by an angry horticulturist with his little gun, turned back and allowed himself to be taken up across the saddle, and taken to a part of the field where no esthetic orange nursery stock grew, and where the accommodating canis latrans allowed himself to be torn to pieces by the hounds. The other game offered like conveniences, and the final hunt for a good lunch in the town made the day a blooming success.

At Coronado.

The social event of the week was the ball given on Thanksgiving evening by the Mizpah Club, of San Diego, in the grand ballroom of the Hotel del Coronado. Full two hundred couples took part in the dancing, and the chairs about the room were well filled with spectators. The costumes were beautiful, the music enchanting, and all went merry as a marriage bell.

President Manvel of the Santa Fé, who has been here for several days, was in the ballroom to look at the dancers.

Daniel McCool, who has been at Coronado for some time, left yesterday for Los Angeles.

S. B. Hynes, general passenger agent of the Santa Fé at Los Angeles, was here this week with the railroad men.

Mr. and Mrs. Dwight Whiting and daughter, who are well known in Los Angeles, have arrived from Boston to spend the winter at Coronado.

Hancock Banning and Dick Lacey were here the early part of this week, and had a jolly good time.

Dick Eagan of San Juan Capistrano is here with the railroad men, enjoying himself as usual.

H. C. Veazie of Los Angeles is visiting at the big hotel.

K. H. Wade of Los Angeles took lunch at the Coronado one day this week.

John E. Jackson was here this week on a visit from the Angel City.

Amos Burr was here this week for a few days.

Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Graham are at the Del Coronado for a short time.

F. P. Barnes was here for a few days this week.

Mrs. M. L. Ferguson is here on a visit from Los Angeles.

A SURE SHOT.

A Night in a Mountain Camp.

We were on our way to the Yo Semite, and had climbed the highest of the outlying spurs of the foothills, and camped for the night on a lofty mountain summit, not less than four or five thousand feet above the level of the sea. It was a very quiet world there, with no one passing over the solitary mountain road, with not a house in sight; with only the squirrels, the gophers and the coyotes to keep us company. But it was a very beautiful world, for all that, for all about us were the forest trees, growing to the height of a hundred and fifty feet or more—the magnificent pines and cedars of that region, which seemed to grow as if they felt the vastness and the grandeur of their surroundings.

I had the feeling myself, as if I were very puny—a mere atom amid the grandeur of those mighty mountains and leaping waterfalls, and trees that seemed to touch the skies and lose themselves there as the light faded and the twilight shadows deepened over the world. I lay down on the soft leaf-covered ground and looked up to their tops, and thought how far they were above the strong roots that held them to the earth, and while I was lying there I saw a huge mountain eagle, with widespread wings, sailing slowly above their crests with his face turned toward the setting sun, which was glowing with splendor, and it looked as if there was nothing to hinder him from flying into its round red disc and losing sight of this world forever.

The men had built a fire and our supper had been cooked while I lay under the trees. The soft, green earth, on which a cloth had been spread, was our table that evening, and the water with which our tea was made had been drawn from a cool, shaded little spring which bubbled up from beneath a granite rock. The moss grew green about its rim, and a wild rosebush, holding the tiniest of blossoms, hung over it as if it were glad to see its face in its crystal mirror.

"I want no tent in such a place as this," I said. "I am going to sleep tonight under the boughs of this mountain cedar, with the clear, starry skies for my roof, and the melody of the little running brook to hush me to slumber."

So I took my blankets and spread them upon the ground above a bed of fallen leaves, and my pillow was of inflated rubber, soft enough for any head, and for the pleasantest dreams. [illegible] is in city seeking dreams that come to people who sleep in such a place as that. Something must have driven all the little dream fairies away—those little elves with rosy wings, that scatter such pleasant fancies about us here in our homes, for they never came near me, and I slept as soundly as the moss-covered log that lay beside the mountain brook, over which the butterflies fluttered in the daytime and on which the pretty birds stood to dry their feathers after their morning bath in its crystal waters. Not a drop of dew fell. Not a bit of chill was in the air so full of balsamic odors. Not a leaf stirred over my head, and never did stars shine clearer, or moon brighter, and never was there such fragrance as was breathed through the woods from the hearts of the mountain lilies and the wild roses.

The night is too beautiful for sleep, I thought; but sleep surprised me all the same. The old sandbag man must have been close at my elbow, for I do not remember thinking anything after that.

But by and by something happened. The report of a rifle rang out sharp upon the night air, waking everybody in camp. How quickly the ladies jumped to their feet, and the men were astir, too.

"O, what do you suppose is the matter?" inquired one trembling young woman. "You don't suppose it's Indians, do you?"

"Indians! bless your heart, no!" said the voice of a motherly woman. "More likely it's a bear or a coyote that has ventured into camp. Let's go and see."

So we all marched down to the point where we saw the men had gathered, with visions of bear steak for breakfast, and wondering whether we should find it nice and palatable, and there, stretched out upon the ground, we saw a dark object, not large enough, surely, for a bear; and—no—it was not a coyote. What could it be?

"What have you killed?" we all inquired in a breath.

"A wildcat, and a big fellow he is, too," said our driver.

"How did you happen to get him?" inquired one.

"Because I didn't let him get me," replied our Jehu laughingly. "I'd been sleeping here sound as a rock; hadn't stirred a hair, but all at once I woke up, an' was just as wide awake the minit I opened my eyes as ever I was in my life, with a strange feeling all over me as if there was danger about me somewhere. Just then I chanced to look up and there was this critter on a limb right over my head, and he was making ready for a spring. My rifle was lying right beside me, and it was not long, I can tell ye, afore I had it in my hands, seizing it with just as little movement as I could, and then I took aim, and luckily I hit the critter in a vital part, and brought him down with the first shot, and there he is, dead as a door nail, ladies."

And a big fellow he was, sure enough, and thankful were we that the aim of our driver had been so steady and sure. But what was that light in the sky that I saw dimly through the swaying boughs of the trees? Was it a fire? What could it be? I looked at it musingly, and lo! it brightened, and the shadows were slowly fading about us. What had become of the night, for surely I had but just fallen asleep when the crack of the rifle wakened us from our slumber?

But no. The dawn brightened, and so perfect and complete had been my sleep the whole night had passed, and what I fancied had been but a few minutes of sleep had been long hours of dreamless rest. E. A. O.

And here is a story which a little girl sends me with the request that I would print it. To be sure I will, my dear. She calls it

THE LOST CHILDREN.

Two little children, Madie and Carl, went out to get branches and holly-berries to trim the mantel-piece, where the Christmas stockings were to hang. Their mother had gone down town to finish getting the Christmas presents, and so they thought they would help, too. They kept walking slowly, until Madie said: "I think we have enough, Carl." Then let us go home, will you?" replied her little brother. So they started for home. By the time they had reached the edge of the town in which they lived it was quite dark, and the stars were coming out. The children began to get frightened. It was so dark by this time that they could not find their way home, so they wandered toward what they thought was home. They reached a large building which proved to be the hospital. "Let us call for mamma here," said Carl. "All right, we will," answered Madie. They stood under one of the windows and called until some one came out to them and asked what was wanted. By this time Carl was crying, and Madie not far from it. Madie gave their names, and a servant took them home. Their mother, who had been detained in town until a late hour, coming home just after, was spared all the worry and anxiety she would otherwise have gone through with. She was very thankful, nevertheless, and hugged her little ones closer that night, thinking how nearly she had lost them. ISABEL.
